While the Arts Council has secured the Princeton Junior School for its summer camp, the organization continues to seek space for its programming between September of this year through the end of 2006.

Princeton's most famous physicist was known not only for changing the way we look at the physical world, but for the way he was able to balance his commitment to science with his involvement in music and writing. This approach could have been the model for the anticipated sequel of the Princeton Writers Block, which has been tentatively dubbed "Quark Park," with a nod to science. The timing is good since Einstein is being celebrated this year, the 100th anniversary of the publishing of his Theory of Relativity.

But for this year's garden, which will again appear on the future site of Palmer Square's luxury housing complex along Paul Robeson Place, the same concept will be built around

Victims of Sexual Assault Lobby For State Law Reforms

Mr. look his case a step further Hardwicke, now living in recently by taking part in a Maryland with his wife and protest against state law on daughter, claims to have suf- the steps of the Statehouse fered depression as a result of on Monday.

After attending the private school in Princeton during the late 1960s and early 1970s, Mr. Hardwicke made allegations against the Ameri-

Mr. Hardwicke was report- edly part of the protest, which was in support of child sex assault victims who want the right to sue the institu- tions where they were abused, a right they currently do not have under state law. Schools, churches, and chari- ties are currently protected under "charitable immunity," a legal defense which Catho- lic leaders and sexual assault victims in the state are lobby- ing against.

A measure to limit the pro- tections that these institutions now have was passed by the state Senate last year, but has stalled in the Assembly.

The group lobbying against the current state law calls "itself, "Fix the Law," and is asking Assembly Speaker Albio Sires to post the bill for a vote. Fix the Law announced its new website, www.fixthelaw.org, on Mon- day, calling on New Jersey residents to lobby Mr. Sires to pass the bill that would allow these sexual assault cases to move forward.

The website also has a link that asks residents to donate $33 toward a 30-second cable television ad supporting the bill.

Mr. Hardwicke's sexual assault case has been dis- missed twice, first on the grounds that the American Boychoir School is an institu- tion and not a person, and does not fall under the N.J. Sexual Abuse Statute. The case was later dismissed on the grounds that the school is protected under "charitable immunity," the state law which protestors spoke out against on Monday.

While Mr. Hardwicke's law- suit was reinstated by the Appellate Division last year, the case has not yet been ruled on by the court, which held oral arguments in November.

Lawrence Lessig, the lawyer currently representing Mr. Hardwicke, was unavailable for comment on Tuesday.

Topics In-Brief: A Community Bulletin

The Princeton Township Zoning Board of Adjust- ment postponed its March 14 hearing for a jazz club proposal at the former Mike's Tavern site at the corner of Bayard Lane and Birch Avenue. The plan, having already received preliminary use approval from the board in April 2004, also received the nod from the Site Plan Review Advisory Board of the Princeton Regional Plan- ning Board in February. The final zoning board hearing is slated to be the final stage in the approval process. The hearing will take place in the main meeting room of Township Hall on April 20 at 7:30 p.m.

New Jersey Future, the state's largest and oldest smart growth research and advocacy organization, has awarded its annual Smart Growth Award to Princeton Future, Princeton Borough, Princeton University, Princeton Regional Chamber of Commerce, and Nassau HKT Asso- ciates for their efforts in the Downtown Redevelopment Project that, once complete, will have transformed two downtown surface parking lots into developed property featuring retail space, apartments, a public square, the new library, a planned food market and a municipal garage. Princeton Future, a community group that exam- ines in-town development, had been omitted from a released list of award recipients printed in the March 9 Town Topics. The recipients will all be honored at the Newark Club in Newark on May 4, between 5:30 and 8 p.m.

The Special Education PTO of the Princeton Regional Schools held an Education Symposium on March 12, where parents were informed on how to research and apply for school grants, as well as the effect New Jer- sey's new S-1701 bill has on local school property taxes. S-1701, or the Education Budget Cap and Oversight Law, mandates that the annual School Board budget increases no higher than 2.5 percent or the cost of living increase. A public discussion on this year's budget will be held on March 29.

Surf to Princeton? On Chamber Website, Princeton Is as Far Away as a Mousepad

If you're a business looking to book a convention in the Princeton region, you're either going to find an events planner to do the tedious footwork or log on to the myriad websites that could take you a hundred different destinations.

But ideally, you would quickly access a comprehensive database that could help you cater to your needs.

Last month the Princeton Regional Chamber of Commerce did something that was most likely a long time coming and removed the middle man for those planning a trip to Princeton. The site, launched on February 16, is called the Princeton Regional Convention and Visitors Bureau and offers an array of information and subsidiary of the chamber, there is obviously an emphasis on "commerce," making Princeton equally accessible to everyone on the web, whether you live on Cherry Hill Road or in Cherry Hill Township.

The website has its origins in an actual convention and visitors bureau that existed within the chamber in the 1990s. That office disbanded in 1998 due to organizational changes and a shift in focus, Ms. Appelget said.

But the chamber quickly came to the realization that there was a demand on the chamber to make readily available information on regional destinations — restaurants, hotels, and the like — through an outlet other than maintaining a regional office location. Regular phone calls, walk-in requests for information were fine, Ms. Appelget said, but those requests were only coming from people who were already in Princeton. The aim of a resurrected bureau would be to widen the scope to attract people to the Princeton area who would otherwise bypass the whole region in the blur of the Penns Neck portion of U.S. 1.

planning services for out-of-towners.

However, if you're reading this story, it's likely that you are not from out of town. Well, there's something on the website for you too.

"The goal is truly to be an information resource portal both for people coming to the area — meeting and event planners — who bring people to the area, or residents that live here who are looking for things to do," said Kristin Appelget, president of the Princeton Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Getting the word out on "hidden little gems" ranging from summer concerts at Princeton University to walking tours conducted by the Historical Society of Princeton was part of the impetus in creating such a comprehensive site. "We were trying to open the doors wider to people," Ms. Appelget said.

However, as the bureau is a commercial entities, and marketing and communication representatives. Their goal, Ms. Appelget said, is to spread the word on Princeton.

"It's looked at as a broad-based effort and we know a good part of that effort is getting the story out and so that marketing and communications aspect is very key to the initiative."

Any member of the chamber who is in an industry group related to visitors and event planning is encouraged to participate, Ms. Appelget added.

As far as visitors coming to Princeton, or current residents looking for something new to do locally, the website and re-institution of the bureau is not geared to usurp the websites of chamber partners, like the Nassau Inn, but simply to be a "clean, quick conduit" to other area resources.

The website also assists out-of-towners with various forms of public transit. In fact, if you go to the sidebar and click on "Getting Here," you'll see how to access Princeton by auto, bus, train, air, and shuttle. It even gets the unsuspecting newbie acclimated to Princeton's parking situation.

But ultimately, the website was launched because Internet is simply the way to do research nowadays, Ms. Appelget said. One would much rather surf Princeton at leisure rather than call "20 different hotels."

"It gives them a much more hands-on experience."

The board's Mr. Ames agreed, saying the website and bureau are simply logical, much needed facilities filling what had been a vacancy.

"Other than the Mercer County Tourism Committee, there really wasn't another convention and visitor's bureau that was taking shape. This seemed like a natural fit for Princeton because they already had a plan in place and just needed to implement it," Mr. Ames said.

It might be difficult to quantify initially what the bureau will do for Princeton's economy, Ms. Appelget said, but she is confident it will be a benefit.

"We know that having a convention and visitor's bureau is a good thing for the travel and leisure economy."

Princeton Theological Seminary Inaugurates Its Sixth President

The Rev. Dr. Iain Torrance was inaugurated Friday as the Princeton Theological Seminary's sixth president since its founding in 1812.

A native of Scotland, Dr. Torrance, 56, was first installed as president in July 2004 after his predecessor, Dr. Thomas Gillespie, retired on June 30, 2004. With his inauguration, the new president officially heads up the first seminary founded by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church USA and the largest of the ten theological seminaries of that 2.5 million-member denomination.

Besides looking forward to discussing "many issues facing contemporary Christians" while helping the Seminary continue to demonstrate "the relevance of the church in America's history and culture," Dr. Torrance said he also hopes to help lead "the interfaith dialogue among the world's major religions" which is "imperative to fostering an atmosphere of peace and stability among the nations.

"I believe an institution such as Princeton Theological Seminary can provide a venue for productive research and conversation in the relationships among Christians, Jews, and Muslims."

Dr. Torrance's inauguration featured more than 64 delegates from institutions of higher education, including the four ancient universities of Scotland — Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Glasgow, and St. Andrews — as well as the Chapel Royal in Scotland, Yale University Divinity School, Duke University, and Howard University School of Divinity.

Twelve ecclesiastical delegates including Rick Ufford-Chase, the moderator of the Presbyterian Church (USA) and the Rev. Nigel Robb, director of educational services for the Church of Scotland, also attended. The service highlighted "Christ is the World's Redeemer," a hymn written by John Ferguson and commissioned by the Seminary for the inauguration.

In 2001 Dr. Torrance was appointed a chaplain-in-ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen in Scotland. He has served as president of the Aberdeen Association of University Teachers and was convener of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland's Committee on Chaplains to the Forces (1998-2001). He is a member of the international dialogue between the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the Orthodox Church. He completed his term as moderator of the Church of Scotland in May 2004. As moderator, he made a trip to Iraq, where he visited with not only British but American troops.

Born in Aberdeen in 1949, Mr. Torrance received the master's degree in art from the University of Edinburgh, the Bachelor of Divinity degree from St. Andrew's University, and the Doctor of Philosophy from Oriel College, Oxford University.

A minister in the Church of Scotland, the mother church of the Presbyterian Church USA, the new seminary president served the parish of Northmave in the Shetland Islands for three years prior to becoming lecturer at

The new president succeeds Dr. Gillespie, 76, who had served as the seminary's president from 1983 to 2004. A native of California, Dr. Gillespie graduated from the seminary in 1954. Dr. Gillespie announced his intention to retire in 2003.

Volunteers Make Waves For Tsunami Relief Fund

Princeton University Art Museum is hosting a "Wave Folding" event this Saturday, March 19, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., to raise money for the Care USA's Earthquake and Tsunami Relief and Rehabilitation Fund (CARE). Artist Luba Model and other volunteers will be in the museum lobby to assist visitors in making origami waves for a donation.

McCaffrey's in West Windsor will also be hosting a wave folding event this Saturday, March 19, from 1 to 5 p.m., to raise money for CARE. The event has been organized by community members Su-Mei Kao and Patty Lee and sponsored by the West Windsor Human Relations Council and the Windsor Area Taiwanese American Association.

Volunteers trained to fold origami will be located on the second floor of McCaffrey's to assist the public in making waves and other sea objects at a suggested donation of $1 each.

Both of these events are part of an ongoing campaign to eventually fold 150,000 waves for CARE. The idea for the "Making Waves" project began in January at the Cotsen Children's Library, when a child requested help with the folding of an origami wave at a workshop in January presented by twins Jennifer and Megan Kao, students at Grover Middle School in West Windsor.

Since then, campus groups, community organizations, local institutions, and private citizens have staged origami wave folding events. The campaign will come to a conclusion during Princeton's Communiiversity on April 23. For information about upcoming events or to find out how to organize a "Making Waves" event, visit www.princeton.edu/makingwaves.

TOWN TALK

A forum for Princeton residents to express opinions about local and national issues

Question of the Week:

What are your views on the Ten Commandments being displayed on government property?

"I am all for it, although there is the issue of 'separation of church and state.' This county was founded on the principles of the Ten Commandments, and I feel that their display on government property is appropriate. In D.C., they are on monuments and federal buildings. Also, when you appear in court or take public office, you are sworn-in on a bible, which reduces the separation of church and state."

— Scott Bosley, Lt. Mercer Engine No. 3, Maclain Street

"I believe in a strong separation of church and state; therefore, I do not believe that that tablets should be displayed on government property."

— Elizabeth Camp, Murray Place

"As long as it is done in a respectful way and other religions are recognized, I do not have a problem with it."

Area Teens Come Together To Show Princeton They Care

In just a few short weeks, Princeton teens will gather together for an afternoon of community service activities to show Princeton how today's youth can contribute to society in a significant way.

The project, "Make a Mess, Make a Difference," is part of a new teen organization, Princeton Cares, founded by Princeton Day School junior Lexi Shechtel. After volunteering over the last few years with Homefront, Lexi felt it was time to find a way to help other teens find a way to give something back to Princeton.

On Sunday, April 3, students from the Hun School, Pennington School, Princeton Day School, Princeton High School, Lawrenceville Prep, and Stuart Country Day School will convene in different parts of town to help out with service projects such as book maintenance at the Princeton Public Library, a basketball clinic for Homefront children at an area school gym, and packing lunches for a food pantry at The Jewish Center.

The project is being sponsored locally by McCaffrey's Market, Hamilton Jewelers, and Target.

Inspiration for Princeton Cares came from New York Cares, an organization which offers professional-quality volunteer organizing and project planning to a wide range of social service agencies, schools, and environmental groups. New York Cares holds four large-scale events annually, with as many as 8,000 participants.

Princeton Cares aims to pursue a similar mission, but on a smaller, more local scale, said Lexi. Like New York Cares, it will have various service projects for teens to be involved in; however, they will all take place on one day each year. Some of the other projects Lexi is looking to get area youths involved in include cleaning up War Memorial Park on Mercer Street, and painting a mural at the Mercer County Youth Detention Center.

To get the project going, Lexi has assigned captains at each of the Princeton public and private schools to recruit students for this year's event. Hoping to get as many as 100 students involved, school captains are currently making announcements, hanging posters, and talking to friends about the project.

"This year's event will be the first of what I hope will become an annual tradition," said Lexi, adding that she has received a lot of local support toward the project. "Both [Township] Mayor Phyllis Marchand and [Borough] Mayor Joe O'Neill have been wonderfully supportive and helpful with this effort."

Mayor Marchand recalled meeting with Lexi in January and being very impressed with her background in volunteerism, and her desire to offer free services to the community.

"I think it's wonderful to see the commitment they are making," she said, adding that in order to help promote the project, the Township has made its website available to Princeton Cares.

Any teens interested in getting involved in the April 3 event can contact Lexi Shechtel by calling (609) 683-1617, emailing ashechtel@pds.org, or visiting the Princeton Township website, www.princetonntp.org, and clicking on "Princeton Cares."

Calendar For Students Will Differ Next Year

Along with welcoming a new superintendent this year, the Princeton Regional School District appears to be welcoming other changes, including the adoption of a new school calendar for the 2005-2006 school year that gives students five days off before Thanksgiving break, and only one week's break after the new year.

The calendar year also ends on June 20, 2006, six days later than this year's school year before snow days are added on.

At last week's school board meeting, some parents expressed doubts about the change in the calendar year's schedule.

Mary Gallagher, the parent of three children in Princeton

Regional Schools and a resident of Katie's Pond Road, recently wrote a letter to new Superintendent Judith Wilson voicing a concern with the new schedule and how it will affect her children's school experience.

"To have minimal days off from school during January, February, the entire month of March, and half of April provides for an extremely long haul for the children, teachers, and parents," she said in the letter, pointing out that having June 20 as the last day of school before snow days are added could cause students to attend school right up to the beginning of July.

While the calendar year for students will begin on September 8, one day earlier than last year, they will have three additional days off in November as compared to last year, giving them a total of seven days off during one month. Winter break will extend from December 23 through January 2, a similar schedule to this year, but spring break will run from April 10 through April 14, as compared to a break during the fourth week of March in 2005.

"I don't know what process you folks used to conjure up this awful school calendar, but I wish more thought had been given to spacing out our holidays more judiciously," said Ms. Gallagher.

Carolyn Hancock, another concerned parent of a Princeton student, asked the school board for an explanation of the calendar at the Board's March 8 meeting.

Ms. Wilson explained that the new calendar will give the district's faculty and staff more opportunities for in-service days, which will be implemented during three of the students' days off in November.

Board President Anne Burns added that the extra break in November gives juniors and seniors more time to visit prospective colleges early on in the year. In addition, giving students time off for election week keeps the district from worrying about having security in the schools during the local voting process, she said.

Ms. Wilson asked that parents be patient and allow the district to try the new calendar this year, adding that if there are problems the Board will go back and reexamine the schedule for the 2006-2007 school year.

The superintendent also said that the district will be in touch with community organizations, such as the YMCA, to help assist parents in finding child care during the school breaks.

The complete calendar for the 2005-2006 school year can be found on the district's website, at www2.prs.k12.nj.us.

Police Blotter

Princeton Cemetery Damaged by Vandals; Headstones Broken

Princeton Cemetery on Greenview Avenue was vandalized on March 8 when person(s) unknown apparently drove an automobile over a section of headstones, knocking ten of them over.

Borough Police have no suspects in the case, which is under continuing investigation by Ptl. Mervyn Arana.

Criminal mischief was also reported at the John Witherspoon Middle School on March 8, consisting of graffiti scrawled on stall partitions in two girls' lavatories in the building's E Wing. The graffiti, written in ink, appeared to be gang related, according to the the investigating officers. The matter is under continuing investigation by school officials and Township Det. Sgt. Ernest Silagyi Jr.

A Philadelphia man, Alvin Levon Fisher, 39, was arrested on March 3 for his part in a credit card theft ring that had been operating in the area for several months. The arresting officer was Det. Kenneth Riley. The accused man was charged with two counts of credit card theft for his role in the crimes, then released with complaint summonses.

Motor vehicle stops led to the arrests of three drivers wanted on warrants from various New Jersey jurisdictions.

On February 26, James Edward Jones, 47, of Skillman, was stopped on Route 206 and arrested after police learned that he was wanted on warrants out of Trenton and Princeton Borough Municipal Courts totaling $505. He was released after posting bail. Charlene M. Scott, 44, of Trenton, was stopped on Vandeventer Avenue on March 2, then arrested after she was discovered to be wanted on a warrant from Ewing Municipal Court for $641. She was released on her own recognizance. Clarence White Jr., 49, of Ewing Street, was arrested the same day after being stopped on Harrison Street, on warrants out of East Windsor Municipal Court. He posted bail of $386 and was released.

Four men were arrested on charges of driving in the Borough while intoxicated: Adam C. Wright, 19, of Panama, a Princeton University student, on March 4; Nick Sardar, 22, of Braemar Drive, on March 10; Melvin Osmar-Lara, 28, of Karin Court, on March 13; and Rodrigo Leon Lazo Viveros, 26, of Gloucester, on March 13. All four were charged with DWI and other motor vehicle offenses, and released on their own recognizance with summonses to appear in Borough Municipal Court.

MONTGOMERY EYE CARE

Presented by Dr. Mary E. Boname

Optometric Physician

TPA CERT #TO 00637 LIC #OA 5298

INTRAOCCULAR LENS REPLACEMENT

Because cataract surgery involves the removal of the eye's natural lens, it must be replaced. This can be accomplished with special eyeglasses, contact lenses, or more commonly, with an intraocular lens implant. This permanent replacement consists of a plastic artificial lens that is usually inserted at the same time that the cataract is removed. Like contact lenses and "prescription" eyeglasses, intraocular lenses differ in terms of refractive power. On the basis of a preoperative evaluation, the ophthalmologist will determine the proper lens power at the implant. Because the intraocular lens cannot change shape (accommodate) like a natural lens it is usually calculated for a middle distance so that the patient can see well enough without glasses.

Although there is no way to prevent the development of cataracts, loss of sight from the disease is largely preventable. With modern technology, cataracts can be removed and good vision restored. At MONTGOMERY EYE CARE, we specialize in the diagnosis, treatment, and management of ocular conditions including cataracts, glaucoma, and macular degeneration. Call us at 609-279-0005 to arrange an eye health exam. We are located at 1325 Rt. 206. Office hours are Mon, Tues, Thurs 10-8; Wed 10-7; Fri 10-6, and Sat 9-3.

P.S. More than half the people in this country over age 65 have some degree of cataract development.

Township Eyes Reconstruction Efforts Along Cherry Valley Road, Route 206

In an effort to improve an often gridlocked area near their municipal borders, Princeton Township and Montgomery Township have arrived at a compromise proposal for improving areas around Cherry Valley Road and Route 206.

In a presentation before the Princeton Regional Planning Board March 3, Princeton Township Engineer Robert Kiser outlined two plans for road re-alignment and improvement. The first targeted area, the corner of Route 206 and Cherry Valley Road, across from the new CVS and Commerce Bank, is a location that has been identified by Township Police as a safety concern, Mr. Kiser said. Specifically, he added, both municipalities' police departments had concerns about the hazards of making a left turn onto Cherry Valley off Route 206 during times of increased traffic.

As a result of working with the New Jersey Department of Transportation, both Montgomery and Princeton township have received grants to build two connector roads that will serve a purpose similar to those of jughandles. Montgomery's connector road will loop behind the Sunoco gas station going north on 206. Princeton Township is working with nearby PNC Bank to create a right-of-way through a portion of the bank parking lot that would connect Cherry Valley Road and Route 206.

With the new roads, vehicles going northbound on 206 intending to make a left onto Cherry Valley Road would make a right immediately after the Sunoco, loop around and go through the traffic signal and proceed west on Cherry Valley. Vehicles headed south on 206 trying to make a left on to Princeton Avenue would also go through the intersection and make a right turn onto a the new connector road at PNC Bank and subsequently proceed through the light headed east on Princeton Avenue.

The plan for the connector roads has been deemed complete by DOT, Mr. Kiser said. The Township will likely hear a response in the next few weeks as DOT is "fast-tracking" the application. Mr. Kiser added that construction for the connector roads would likely occur sometime later this year.

With the building of the connector roads, Mr. Kiser said the Township was looking to "mostly" close off Hillside Avenue by shutting down access at Cherry Valley and allowing a northbound only right turn from Hillside to Cherry Valley and a right-turn only off of Cherry Valley.

Mr. Kiser indicated that both Princeton Township and Montgomery Township have submitted these proposals to DOT together, and that the two municipalities would agree to use one contractor for the project.

Jefferson's Curve

The Township has also made arrangements to smooth the so-called "Jefferson's Curve" just south of the Pulte Homes development off Cherry Valley Road. The re-alignment would carve out a portion of property to straighten the curve. The adjustment would have no impact on nearby residences, Mr. Kiser said. The Township also worked with Mercer County to redo the culvert in that location in order to re-align the road. The alignment calls for the installation a new culvert and the extension of a six-foot wide walkpath along the curve.

The county has hired Hopewell Valley Engineering to do the design work. Construction for that project, however, will not be slated for completion until late 2006, Mr. Kiser said.

Spring Break Science To Take Place at Library

When Princeton Regional Schools go on Spring Break March 21 through 25, science class will move to Princeton Public Library, where the emphasis will be on fun. The library will host its popular Spring Break Science series each day at 2:30 p.m.

Spring Break Science kicks off with Strange World of Reptiles on Monday, March 21. Bill Boesenberg of "Snakes 'n Scales and Turtle Tales," familiar to library customers for their previous appearances at the library, will bring live snakes, lizards, turtles and crocodilians and show children how they live. He will explain the hows and whys of these strange creatures, from the ones that live under the porch to the ones from distant continents. The program is for children ages four through 12 years.

Registration is required for this series. To register, call (609) 924-9529, ext. 240, e-mail kids@princetonlibrary.org, or visit the third floor Youth Services Desk. For more information on library programs and services, visit www.princetonlibrary.org.

prominent Princeton scientists. "One thing about architecture is that we have to be a bit of a scientist, writer, costumer, aesthetician, logician, and a bit of a lot of things," said Kevin Wilkes, a principal in the architectural firm Princeton Design Guild, and a member of the management team for last year's garden. "There might be some hard science facts that come out here that could be illuminated. Science deals with some real, provable laws," he added, saying that some of the design elements could, indeed, be based on science.

"But nonetheless, it will be a garden event: It will have plantings, it will have a place to sit and relax, to read and to hear readings and see events." Several as-yet-unnamed Princeton University professors have reportedly signed on to the project, and David Dobkin, dean of the faculty at Princeton University's Department of Computer Science, is said to have been involved in the conceptual planning of the garden.

The aim for this year's event will be more organized, with more outreach than last year. While well received by the community, the 2004 Writers Block did not generate the kind of revenue that organizers had hoped for. The garden was only open for about two-and-a-half months, and a folly auction held at the garden's closing produced only about a fifth of the $150,000 pricetag of the installation.

This year, Mr. Wilkes, along with returning organizers Alan Goodheart and Peter Soderman, intend to launch a fund-raising campaign to raise at least $100,000 with a goal of raising $65,000 by the first week of May, hoping to have the garden open by Memorial Day or by Princeton's Reunions Weekend at the beginning of June.

The three organizers have set up the not-for-profit "Princeton Occasions," which will allow donors to give tax-deductible donations to help finance the garden. Members of the group are optimistic in spite of the financial hit accrued by all parties involved last year.

So why, in the name of Einstein, would organizers be inclined to bring this back after taking such a monumental net loss? Two reasons, Mr. Wilkes said.

The garden was immensely popular. Families would go there on the weekends, local groups would hold events there, even the writers who served as inspiration to the architecture held readings there. One memorable moment was Civil War expert James McPherson reading passages from his Pulitzer Prize-winning Battle Cry of Freedom in the waning afternoon sun of late October.

Second, the garden had merit. In November 2004, Writers Block was awarded the "Honor Award for Built Project" by the New Jersey chapter of the American Institute of Architects. The award validated an experimental endeavor in urban planning, and despite the financial loss, it encouraged organizers to try again.

After consulting with a professional fund-raiser, Princeton Occasions will embark on a campaign this week to properly finance what, organizers feel, could be an overwhelming success. "We have a certain level of confidence that we didn't have last year. We have a track record now and we're going to open earlier in the year so people have a longer run to enjoy the garden," Mr. Wilkes said.

Any plan for a garden needs to be approved by the Princeton Borough Zoning Board of Adjustment, but in light of last year's approval, that doesn't seem to be an insurmountable obstacle.

Palmer Properites, LLC, will return to the Princeton Regional Planning Board in late May or early June with a final site plan for the 100 luxury apartments and condominiums along that part of Paul Robeson, or "Hulfish North," according to David Newton, vice president of Palmer Square

Management. A best case scenario would be the ability to be "in the ground" by the end of the year, but a springtime ground-breaking is more likely to be the case, Mr. Newton said.

"Quark Park" is the result of a partnership between Princeton Occasions and Palmer Square. While Palmer Square will not dictate the content or theme, it does serve as the landlord for a property that will soon be prime real estate, and as long as that land is not developed, Mr. Newton said he welcomed the outdoor installation's return.

"The lot is still vacant and they did a very good job last year, so it didn't take too much for them to persuade us to do it again," he said, adding "as long as they do as nice a job as they did last year." Mr. Newton also said that from a business standpoint, the garden is good for the shops in and around Palmer Square: "It attracts people to Palmer Square and that's what I see as positive." To donate or for those interested in volunteering, call Princeton Occasions at (609) 683-1034, extension 3.

Township Democrats Invite Grassroots Participation

The Princeton Township Democratic Party is planning to increase grassroots participation in the selection and development of candidates for local office, prior to introducing qualified candidates at its local candidates endorsement night, Sunday March 20.

Qualified candidates will be invited to appear before the Princeton Community Democratic Organization (PCDO) at the March 20 endorsement night, which will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Suzanne Patterson Senior Center behind Borough Hall. PCDO membership is open to any registered Democrat residing in Princeton Township or Borough. At the meeting, members will have the opportunity to hear the candidates, to question them, and, at the end of the evening, to vote their preferences. To receive a PCDO endorsement, a candidate must win 60 percent approval of members present and voting, including a majority of the votes of members residing in the candidate's home municipality. While the PCDO event provides important input, it is not binding on the Party's decision.

The official Democratic Party endorsement choice rests with the members of the Princeton Township Democratic Committee, who will weigh the input from the candidate selection subcommittee, the PCDO, the candidates themselves, and other sources of information. The committee consists of two members (a man and a woman) from each of the Township's 14 voting districts, elected in the Democratic Primary every two years.

Princeton Future Saluted for Key Role In Downtown Redevelopment Project

To the Editor:

We look forward to recognizing Princeton's downtown redevelopment project on May 4 as one of the state's great collaborative smart growth efforts. For that reason, we would add two very important words to your article (Town Topics, March 9) about the award: Princeton Future. This key group was omitted from your list of Princeton partners who will be recognized by New Jersey Future at our annual statewide awards celebration.

Princeton Future played a key role in the redevelopment project, and the strong partnership between Princeton Future, the Borough of Princeton, the Princeton Regional Chamber of Commerce, Princeton University, and Nassau HKT Associates was essential to the project's success. We invite Princetonians who want to learn more about the awards program or who want to join the smart growth celebration on May 4 to visit our website at www.njfuture.org.

Princeton Regional Schools Calendar Criticized for Misplaced Vacations

Note: The following is a copy of an open letter sent to Judith Wilson, Superintendent, Princeton Regional Schools, and Anne Burns, President, Board of Education. To the Editor:

Who in their right mind approved the school calendar for next year? It is the worst calendar I have ever seen. Were any of the parents or teachers consulted? I am the mother of three children currently attending Princeton schools and I wonder if any parents were allowed to provide input regarding the school calendar.

We have a week off in the second week of November! That's just when the momentum for the new school year is starting for the children and their families, and to break it up with a week away from school is ridiculous.

To return to school on September 8 is too late. Everyone's mind set is ready for "back to school" right after Labor Day; and then to have minimal days off from school during January, February, the entire month of March, and half of April provides for an extremely long haul for the children, teachers, and parents. Plus, those of us with summer plans have to stick around until June 20. We all know we will have snow delays so we'll be lucky to get out of town by the fourth of July.

This calendar is not set in stone and can be remedied. How about switching those unnecessary days off in November and letting us have some down time in February, when a break from the long tedious winter months and school would be much more appreciated and beneficial?

I don't know what process you folks used to conjure up this awful school calendar but I wish more thought had been given to spacing out our holidays more judiciously.

Please consider my concerns. Thank you.

Councilman Faults Study for Failing To Examine Combined Police Force

To the Editor:

On March 1, Princeton Borough Council introduced the municipal budget for 2005. The budget would seem to accomplish one of the goals that Council set for itself in 2004 — namely, that this year's expenditures would not exceed last year's. On paper, at least, Council has met that goal by coming under 2004's total budget by $14,303.

But before my colleagues and I get too carried away congratulating ourselves on our fiscal restraint, it must be said that the very same evening Council introduced this austerity budget, it moved forward with a bond issue which would provide nearly $100,000 to Carroll Buracker & Associates to study our police force. If the money for this study had been treated as a regular expense, and not as a "capital improvement," we would have broken our goal and the total budget for 2005 would have exceeded 2004 by $85,229. But however we choose to pay for it, I believe this proposed study to be an unnecessary and wasteful expenditure of taxpayer dollars.

The proposal from Carroll Buracker & Associates that I have seen is unfocused and vague. It is unclear what the study seeks to accomplish, or what problems it seeks to address. It does not consider possible consolidation with the Princeton Township Police Department, and, in fact, Carroll Buracker & Associates has declined to even study the possibility of consolidation at this time.

That is why I supported my colleague, Roger Martindell, when he proposed a resolution of Borough Council stating its support for the idea of police consolidation with the Township in principle, and calling upon the Township to do likewise. If this resolution is supported in both communities, then I believe we have provided at least some context for the police study to go forward. Absent that commitment, the study makes no sense.

Our Borough police force has a well-deserved reputation for competence and professionalism. In their own surveys of our residents, our force has found a high level of satisfaction with the services it provides. In addition, I am highly confident that Chief Anthony Federico will provide the department with excellent leadership in the years to come. What can we hope to gain with our $100,000, except perhaps the reputation of being an easy mark to out-of-state consultants?

Township Zoning Board Challenged To Reject Application for Jazz Club

To the Editor:

As a homeowner on Birch Avenue, I have been following the controversy over the use of the Mike's Tavern lot with growing alarm. Stephen Distler, a developer, wants to replace a 60-year old sleepy tavern with a 10,000 square-foot nightclub, with noise day and night every day of the week, a large parking lot, and (apparently to stave off legal worries about sound pollution) a 10-foot wall of the type usually associated with interstate highways. His proposed nightclub will also rip the fabric of the John Street-Witherspoon neighborhood, the historically black section of Princeton. That is where I grew up, it is still home to me, and I would like to add my voice to the tide of opposition welling up from both sides of Bayard Lane.

Put a large nightclub on the corner of Birch Avenue and parents with children will think twice before buying a home on a street where cars are regularly barreling past from a late-night club. Mr. Distler insists that his nightclub will be "a positive addition to the neighborhood." Certainly any savvy developer will try to position himself in the best possible light. But given the strong protests of dozens of neighborhood residents, I do not see how his claim can be sustained, unless he believes that the community does not know what is best for itself. This is exactly the sort of paternalistic attitude that Princeton has worked so hard to leave behind. I hope that he does not succeed in imposing his nightclub on our quiet residential neighborhood.

And to the members of the Township Zoning Board: you have the opportunity to make a historic decision or a historic mistake. If you ignore what the neighborhood is actually saying, the judgment of history is not likely to be kind.

Editor's Note: The Princeton Township Zoning Board of Adjustment meeting that was originally scheduled for March 14 has been postponed to April 20 at 7 p.m.

Health Care Task Force to Address Democratic Organization on Sunday

To the Editor:

It is clear from the local newspapers, and from conversations going on in our neighborhoods, that there are a number of concerns over the future of the University Medical Center at Princeton, and the land currently occupied by the hospital and Merwick. There are many questions regarding possible zoning changes, both for temporary hospital expansion and for future occupants. There is even talk of the hospital remaining in its current location on Witherspoon Street.

In response to these concerns, the Princeton Community Democratic Organization has invited the Princeton Health Care Task Force to take part in the PCDO Candidates' Night and Local Issues Forum, which will take place Sunday, March 20 at the Suzanne Patterson Center at 7:30 p.m. The Task Force will give a presentation of its recommendations to Princeton Health Care Systems, the municipalities, and the regional planning and zoning boards. The public is welcome to come hear from the Task Force, as well as from Democratic candidates for Township Committee and Borough Council. There will be a question and answer period following each part of the meeting.

The PCDO meeting provides an excellent opportunity for residents to learn about the Task Force recommendations, and to address any other local issues with the candidates and elected officials. As steps are taken to revise the Master Plan and adjust zoning, it is important for residents to stay informed and to be involved in the discussions leading to decisions which will impact our towns. We invite you to join us this Sunday.

Fire Wire

The Princeton Fire Department responded to 25 calls from March 1 through March 13. Fire and carbon monoxide alarms were set off during renovation work by construction companies and malfunctioning systems from residences, schools and businesses on Prospect Avenue, Potters Run, Washington Road, Hulfish Street, Witherspoon Street, Hawthorne Avenue, Independence Drive, Walnut Lane, Elm Road, Palmer Square, and Hageman Lane.

On the morning of March 9, crews from all three companies responded to a residence on the Great Road for a smoke condition. Investigation determined the source of the smoke to be a malfunctioning furnace.

Around noon on March 10, crews responded to a report of smoke showing from the roof of the Princeton Shopping Center. Upon arrival no smoke was showing and the cause was determined to be a malfunctioning light ballast at one of the stores.

in the late evening of March 11, crews responded to a report of a leaking propane tank on Alexander Road.

Early the next morning, a crew was dispatched to an Ober Road residence for a ruptured water pipe.

Later on March 12, a report of a kitchen fire at a Terhune Road residence proved to be unfounded. Also that day, a Spring Street business reported a smoke condition inside the structure. Investigating crews determined the cause of the smoke to be a burned out motor.

The Princeton Fire Department is an all-volunteer organization and always needs new members. Anyone interested should call (609) 497-7646, or (609) 731-1314.

Safety Facts

A portable fire extinguisher can save lives and property by putting out a small fire or containing it until the fire department arrives; but portable extinguishers have limitations. Because fire grows and spreads so rapidly, the number one priority for residents is to get out safely.

Use a portable fire extinguisher when the fire is confined to a small area, such as a wastebasket, and is not growing; once everyone has exited the building; after the fire department has been called or is being called; and when the room is not filled with smoke.

For the home, select a multi-purpose extinguisher that is large enough to put out a small fire, but not so heavy as to be difficult to handle. Choose a fire extinguisher that carries the label of an independent testing laboratory.

Install fire extinguishers close to an exit and keep your back to a clear exit when you use the device so you can make an easy escape if the fire cannot be controlled. If the room fills with smoke, leave immediately.

RESCUE REPORT

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad responded to 38 calls from March 5 through March 11. Twenty-one were located in Princeton Township, 12 in Princeton Borough, and five were in neighboring municipalities. Included in the above numbers were four calls to Princeton University.

At 1:25 p.m. on Monday, March 7, the Squad responded for a worker who fell off a ladder from the second story roof of a house and landed on a concrete porch. The man was reported by co-workers to be having a seizure, but it was unclear if the seizure preceded the fall or was a result of a head injury. The EMS crew found the male patient on the front walkway to the porch in a post seizure state and combative, a potential indication of a head injury. The man was also unable to communicate with EMS as he did not speak English. The crew immobilized the patient's head, neck, and spine, and he was rushed to the trauma center in Trenton.

On Thursday, March 10, the Squad was dispatched with the Princeton Fire Department for a smoke condition at the Princeton Shopping Center. One ambulance and the Squad's technical rescue truck responded. All units were released when firefighters traced the smoke back to a faulty light fixture in one of the stores.

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad is a volunteer-run organization. Community members interested in joining should contact the Squad at (609) 924-3335, or visit www.pfars.org.

down from the previously-proposed 18,930 square feet.

Mr. Bienstock said the aim is to complete the engineering drawings by April and put building contracts out to bid and have a formal ground-breaking by June. That ground-breaking will coincide with the launching of a formal campaign that will feature various fund-raising events.

"Our best guess is that the campaigning will last 18 months to two years," Mr. Bienstock said, adding that the 2006 completion target date is attainable. "Our building committee and our architects all feel that it's a realistic date. This is not an enormous building. Most of the building that is there will remain and will be renovated," Mr. Bienstock said.

The new construction will amount to an additional 8,040 square feet.

In related news, Anne Reeves, the long-time executive director of the Arts Council, will now take on the role of funding director, assisting in community outreach, fund-raising, and special events. The Arts Council is currently seeking a candidate to fill the role of executive director.

LEGAL FORUM

EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENTS — IS YOURS REALLY ENFORCEABLE?

Are you uncertain as to whether or not your employment agreement is legally enforceable? You are not alone. Most employees with employment agreements are uncertain about their employment status. This article should clear up the confusion.

Employment can be separated into two principle categories: 1) "at-will," and 2) contract. Most of us are "at-will" employees. That means that if we decide to quit our job we can simply give notice to our employer and leave. Likewise, the employer can generally terminate our employment for any reason, as long as the termination does not run afoul of the discrimination laws. The other major category of employment is contract employment. In this type of employment, the employee and employer enter into a formal understanding regarding: 1) the job responsibilities of the employee; 2) the compensation of the employee; and 3) the duration of employment. These three factors are essential ingredients in an enforceable employment contract in New Jersey.

In today's booming economy, employers are much more willing to enter into employment contracts than they are during periods of recession. This is simply because in times of low unemployment, the value of the employee to the employer is greatly increased. Many employers are still hesitant, however, to enter into binding contracts with employees which reduce their ability to quickly reorganize their employee structure. As a result, in the last few years there has been a profusion of "offer letters," "letters of intent," and similar documents which bear striking resemblance to employment contracts.

These documents often give employees a false sense of security. Before employees rely upon these documents to protect them from termination, however, they should carefully review these documents to determine whether or not they meet the minimum requirements of an employment contract in New Jersey. In general, to be enforceable, an employment contract must set forth the duties, compensation and duration of employment. Of particular importance is the duration of employment.

Many offer letters set forth compensation and job duties in great detail, but fail to describe the period of employment. This omission is a crucial factor in determining the enforceability of an employment agreement. In the absence of a set period of time for employment, courts have held that the employment is "at-will," and can therefore be terminated at any time by the employer.

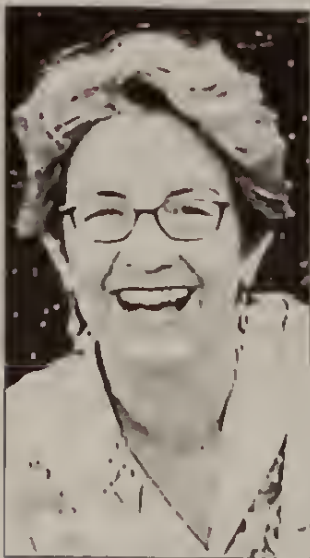

This issue is of great importance to those employees who receive vested or unvested stock options as part of their compensation. Clearly, an unvested stock option which can be exercised several years from now is of much less value to an "at-will" employee than it is to an employee with enforceable contract rights.

If an employee has questions regarding status of his or her employment, particularly where stock options are involved in compensation, the employee should review the employment "contract" with a legal professional to confirm their rights. If the employee discovers that his or her employment "contract" is not enforceable, the employee may wish to take advantage of this growth economy to secure a position which provides an enforceable employment contract that will provide protection to the employee from the inevitable reorganizations and downsizing which will accompany the next economic downturn. As always, knowing your legal rights prior to confronting a potential problem can potentially aid you in avoiding the problem altogether.

Roberta Isleib

Murder Mystery Writer To Speak at Bookshop

Golf enthusiast and clinical psychologist Roberta Isleib will discuss Fairway to Heaven, the fourth in her award-winning golf murder mystery series at the Cloak & Dagger mystery bookshop on Tuesday, March 22, at noon.

Ms. Isleib's latest novel is set in the competitive world of the LPGA golf tour where her protagonist, Cassandra Burdette, is an aspiring professional golfer competing in a three-tour tournament in Pinehurst, N.C. Besides working on her handicap, she is involved in solving a murder and unraveling complex relationships on the golf tour.

The author's first novel, Six Strokes Under, received critical acclaim as the best first mystery novel. Writing golf mysteries allows Ms. Isleib to combine her love of golf, the psychology of personal relationships, and solving mysteries.

A New Jersey native, the author now lives with her family in Madison, Conn. She attended Princeton University, University of Tennessee, University of Florida, and Yale University, receiving advanced degrees in psychology. Ms. Isleib has also published articles on golf psychology in Women's World of Golf, Golf for Women, Tee Time Magazine, and National Golfer.

The Cloak & Dagger mystery bookshop is located at 349 Nassau Street. For more information, call (609) 688-9840.

Influence of Publications Subject of Author's Talk

Noliwe M. Rooks, author of Ladies' Pages, will appear at the Princeton U-Store on Wednesday, March 23, at 7 p.m., as part of the Women's History Month talk.

Ladies' Pages sheds light on the most influential African American women's magazines — Ringwood's Afro-American Journal of Fashion, Half-Century Magazine for the Colored Homemaker, Tan Confessions, Essence, and O, the Oprah Magazine — and their little-known success in shaping the lives of black women.

The book demonstrates how these rare and thought-provoking publications contributed to the development of African-American culture and the ways in which they in turn reflect important historical changes in black communities.

Ms. Rooks reveals in detail how these publications contributed to the concepts of black sexual identity, rape, migration, urbanization, fashion, domesticity, consumerism, and education. Her book is essential reading for everyone interested in the history and culture of African Americans.

Ms. Rooks is the associate director of African American Studies at Princeton University, and a lecturer in history and the program in African-American Studies. She is also the author of Hair Raising: Beauty, Culture, and African American Women, as well as the associate editor for African American Artists in Paris, 1920-1975.

The author will be at the Princeton University Store, located at 36 University Place, just off Nassau Street in Princeton. The talk will take place in the third-floor events area. There is free parking directly across the street.

For more information, call (609) 921-8500, ext. 238 or visit the U-Store website at www.pustore.com.

Cornel West to Speak On Democracy in Schools

Cornel West will give a lecture on "Why Democracy Demands Quality, Diversity, and Leadership in Universities," at Rutgers University on Wednesday, March 23, at 7 p.m. The free, public event will launch a three-day symposium that brings together faculty teams from Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, and other universities in a research and action project, "Reaffirming Action: Designs for Diversity in Higher Education."

A professor of religion and African-American studies at Princeton University, Mr. West's work has been described as a "polemical weapon that attempts to transform linguistic, social, cultural, and political tradition to increase the scope of individual development and democratic actions." His writing, speaking, and teaching weave together the American traditions of the Baptist Church, transcendentalism, socialism, and pragmatism. His most recent book, Democracy Matters, was published in 2004.

Mr. West's lecture will take place on the Rutgers University campus, in the Douglass College Center, Traves Hall, 100 George St., New Brunswick. For more information, visit www.rutgers.edu.

Shakespeare and Company: Portrait of a Bookshop

Short of turning the main gallery at Firestone Library into a replica of Sylvia Beach's Paris bookshop, the curators have arranged "Portraits of the Lost Generation" in a way that effectively suggests the atmosphere of the place and the time: Shakespeare and Company between the wars (1920-1939). The subtitle of the exhibit puts the emphasis on the photographs taken by Man Ray and "other expatriates," but what makes it worth seeing is something more subtle than the quality of the photography. A number of these images have already appeared in various memoirs, histories, and biographies. Some are little more than snapshots and have value mainly because of the subject or the subject's signed inscription. Such is the nature of this illustrated gathering of the writers and artists who frequented the bookshop during those years, however, that the aging of a faded photograph becomes aesthetically pleasing in itself. Man Ray's picture of William Carlos Williams says as much about the presence of the shop over time as it does about the presence of the poet. In the photo Sylvia Beach snapped of Ezra Pound as he stood intently reading, surrounded by books, what comes through is the character of the place and a sense of the owner's proprietary satisfaction at having captured a special customer and a special moment. Because 80-plus years have dimmed the image, the moment and the man seem to be receding deeper into history even as you look.

For all the stress on expatriates and the so-called lost generation, Shakespeare presides over the exhibit as he presided over the actual bookshop at 12 Rue l'Odéon, its patron saint, his face on the signboard hanging in front (now hanging on the west wall of the gallery), his name in large letters above the entrance. In her memoir, Shakespeare and Company, Ms. Beach says she picked "my partner Bill" because she felt he was always "well-disposed to my undertaking; and, besides, he was a best seller." The first thing you see as you enter the gallery is a small oak wall cabinet containing the toy soldiers who, in the owner's words, "stood guard over the House of Shakespeare" and, for that purpose, were stationed near the entrance. Here, too, is the small Staffordshireware bust of Shakespeare that occupied Ms. Beach's desk. The same painted figurine (the Bard cloaked in a dark red mantle) appears again in the same display case in the photograph of Ms. Beach and her fellow bookseller, Adrienne Monnier, whose shop, La Maison des Amis des Livres, was also located on the Rue l'Odéon. Some of the photographs on display at Firestone are visible in the background, along with the cozily cluttered, book-laden interior where young Ernest Hemingway browsed and took advantage of Shakespeare and Company's lending library in the days when "there was no money to buy books." In his Paris memoir, A Moveable Feast, he writes of "a warm, cheerful place with a big stove in winter, tables and shelves of books" and "photographs of famous writers both dead and living. The photographs all looked like snapshots and even the dead writers looked as though they had really been alive." Hemingway's laconic observation is no less true of the "dead writers" in this exhibit.

The Princeton Connection

In describing the Rue l'Odéon, Ms. Beach mentions a theatre at the end of the street that reminded her of "Colonial houses in Princeton." In fact, she came to Paris from Princeton, where she grew up. Her father was the minister of the First Presbyterian Church from 1906 to 1923. When she decided to make her dream of a Paris bookshop a reality, she sent the following cable home to her mother: "Opening bookshop in Paris. Please send money." Her mother sent all her savings.

As you move through the remnants of Shakespeare and Company, it begins to seem that the expatriate movement was born in New Jersey. For instance, Man Ray, the surrealist/dadaist painter/photographer featured in the exhibit, came to Paris from Ridgefield, where his name was Emanuel Radnitsky. The "Bad Boy" of music, composer George Antheil, another self-created Parisian who can be seen here in two Man Ray photos sporting an exotic, almost Beatlesque haircut, grew up in Trenton and emigrated to Paris after showing little aptitude for his father's business, the Friendly Shoestore. Then, of course, there's Princeton's own F. Scott Fitzgerald, who rates more space in the exhibit than any other writer except Gertrude Stein. Also on view is Lawrenceville's Thornton Wilder, and, of course, the aforementioned William Carlos Williams from Rutherford.

Man Ray is quoted as saying "I photograph the things I do not wish to paint, the things which already have an existence." The "things" here are people, most of them writers; examples of his more characteristically inventive work are displayed in the alcoves (he calls some of these "rayographs"). His comment after photographing Gertrude Stein in 1922 indicates that he might have been tempted to take liberties but thought better of it, deciding not to try "fantasy or acrobatics with her physiognomy." In a Ray photograph of Stein that shows her posing for sculptor Jo Davidson, she looks like a football player hunched forward on the bench. Her reaction to Davidson's depiction of her suggests that Ray was wise to avoid improvisation; according to the posted commentary, she said: "That's Gertrude Stein, that's all of Gertrude Stein there is." Probably the most familiar image of Stein after the Picasso portrait is the photo of her sitting opposite her companion, Alice B. Toklas, in their Rue de Fleurus parlor, a picture taken by Ray's then-assistant Berenice Abbott, who went on to greater things with her brilliant photographic studies of New York City in the thirties.

Several of the most memorable images are by unknown photographers, including the digital reproduction of one from 1925 showing the Fitzgeralds, Scott, Zelda, and daughter Scotty, kicking up their heels in front of a Christmas tree, and one of Ernest Hemingway on the beach, naked except for a makeshift fig leaf.

Purely in terms of quality and composition, Gisèle Freund's may be the best photographs in the exhibit. It is easy to imagine making a painting, or an illustration for a children's storybook, from her gelatin silver print of the front of Shakespeare and Company that shows Adrienne Monnier hunched over the outside book display in her heavy cloak and long full skirt.

Gisèle Freund and Man Ray were among those who fled from Paris when the Germans invaded France. Though Shakespeare and Company eventually surfaced and survived after the war, it was forced to "disappear" during the occupation. When Sylvia refused to sell a German officer a copy of James Joyce's Finnegans Wake, he was furious and told her they were coming that same day to confiscate "everything." With the help of friends, she took down all the photographs and carried them with the books in clothes baskets to a vacant apartment on the third floor. She even had a carpenter dismantle the shelves while a house painter painted out the name Shakespeare and Company. By the time the Germans came back there was nothing left to take. The thought of how close we came to actually losing the material displayed in this exhibit underscores the inadequacy of the facile, catch-all term used to describe it. "Lost Generation" is a convenient label but it seems empty next to the literary and artistic excitement of the world that lived between the book-and-picture-lined walls of Sylvia Beach's bookshop.

In A Moveable Feast, Ernest Hemingway provides perhaps the best account of that world and of what it was actually like to browse and do business at Shakespeare and Company. He also offers this portrait of the person who made it all possible, a picture "taken" the day he first walked into the shop and met the young woman from Princeton: "Sylvia had a lively, sharply sculptured face, brown eyes that were as alive as a small animal's and as gay as a young girl's, and wavy brown hair that was brushed back from her fine forehead and cut thick below her ears and at the line of the collar of the brown velvet jacket she wore. She had pretty legs and she was kind, cheerful, and interested, and loved to make jokes and gossip. No one that I ever knew was nicer to me."

"Portraits of the Lost Generation" will be on view through April 17 at no charge in Firestone Library's Main Gallery from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. It was organized by Don Skemer, curator of manuscripts in the library's Department of Rare Books and Special Collections, and John Logan, literature bibliographer in the library, with the assistance of graduate student in English Keri Walsh. —Stuart Mitchner

Now In Its Third Year, Hospital Show Transforms Adversity Into Art

Lois Kilgore is a 23-year-old painter whose macular degeneration subsequently developed into total blindness. Instead of succumbing to her disability, however, she continued her artistic pursuit, but this time with sculpture — feeling her way with her hands.

Shirley Bell, a quadriplegic, is not only a self-taught painter, but a self-taught mouth painter.

As art brightens the public corridors in a new exhibit at the University Medical Center at Princeton, it is the integrity of the work that a casual viewer will first notice: the stories behind the art only make the show that much more impressive.

Make no mistake, though. The point of ArtFirst! is not to underscore the disability, but to highlight the actual art. The show grew out of an event that Princeton Health-Care System president and CEO Barry Rabner brought to Princeton when he came from his previous post at Main Line Health System in Pennsylvania. With 81 artists combining for 275 pieces of artwork in one exhibit, viewers have an opportunity to see a whole range of artistic expression, including photography, mixed-media, watercolors, oils, and sculpture.

"We really try to maintain a certain quality and level of art in the show," said Cindy Torruellas, who, along with Cynthia Shull, is the co-chair of this year's event. Now in its third year, the show, which is sponsored by the Auxiliary of the University Medical Center at Princeton, is an international, juried exhibition and sale of all-original art and crafts that will be on display through April 15. ArtFirst! will once again give 80 percent of its sales to the hospital's breast health wing with the remainder of the proceeds going to the artists.

Some of the featured artists, like John Bisbee, did not tap into their artistic talents until they became victims of their disabilities. Bisbee, a native of Tampa, was studying at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology when he was diagnosed with schizophrenia. He began painting at the hospital where he was receiving care and subsequently took art classes at various art centers and universities. While Bisbee has since completed his doctorate in physics, he continues to paint and exhibit his work.

Mr. Bisbee's is a case of art becoming therapy, but a number of artists in the show, like Frances Schatz, began their careers as artists, became disabled, and persevered. While teaching art at a Pennsylvania elementary school, Schatz suffered a brain injury that left her without use of her right hand. Schatz is now working to become an art therapist.

"There are so many who were trained in art, happened to have an accident, and still used their art — but in a different way," Shull said.

The exhibit brings in hundreds of submissions yearly, Shull and Torruellas said, which makes the task of whittling down the works displayed in the show that much more difficult. There was also an issue as to how mentally ill an artist must be to take part in the show. Those who were mildly depressed, for instance, were not accepted, but those suffering from schizophrenia, and other cognitive disorders were allowed to enter.

Not all artists want to identify their work with their disability, Shull added. "There are a few who we know are disabled who do not want to be classified as such."

The co-chairs and exhibit curator Lois Levy put out a "call to artists" through galleries, newspapers, magazines, websites, and databases that brought in an onslaught of slides from artists interested in taking part in the show. From there, the three sat down and reviewed the works. "We tried to maintain a higher standard for the show and that's why we get such a wonderful response from quality artists," Torruellas said, placing an emphasis on the desire to keep past exhibitors coming while bring new artists in.

One notable new participant in the show is Beth Livingston, a Princeton native who was paralyzed from the waist down in an auto accident in 1989. A sculptor now residing in Bozeman, Mont., Ms. Livingston uses her upperbody strength to create the large, heavy pieces that she contributed to the show.

"The fact that you're physically disabled does not mean that you're doomed to just sit there and live day-to-day," Shull said.

In this show, as the name suggests, it's the art that comes first, which is just as the artists intended it.

Library Collage Artist Signs Limited-Edition Posters of His Work

Artist Ik-Joong Kang has turned a limited edition poster print of his mixed media wall installation "Happy World," the signature public artwork of Princeton Public Library, into 50 one-of-a-kind pieces of art available to prospective members of the Friends of the Library.

Not content to simply sign and number each of the 50 prints in the limited-edition run, Kang created an individual drawing on each of the posters: scullers on Carnegie Lake, a train to the moon, a lighthouse that beams to the other side of the poster, baseball players, an airplane flying past a cloud in the shape of "2005" and many more.

The posters, which measure 30 inches wide by 13 inches deep, are printed on archival paper and framed. The image, by photographer Cle Stroud, is a unique "straight-on" view of the artwork, which is mounted on a curved wall outside the Community Room on the first floor of the library.

"Happy World" is a 30-foot-long installation that features more than 2,000 of the New York artist's, 3-inch-square paintings interspersed with artifacts and words contributed by the Princeton community. Items as rare as a deck of cards once owned by Albert Einstein share wall space with everyday materials, family photos and children's drawings, including those created by schoolchildren containing the word "library" in one of the 55 languages spoken in the Princeton Regional School District.

Each poster carries the artist's inscription, "Yes, we are connected," a reference to Kang's philosophy of using his art to unite people. Kang sees the poster project as an extension of the sense of connectedness he felt when he collaborated with the community in creating "Happy World."

"The people who buy this poster, and support the library by joining the Friends, now become connected with me and with all the people from the community who donated articles for 'Happy World,'" Kang said following his signing session at the library. "We all truly are connected."

Stroud created the image for the poster by painstakingly photographing groups of 10 of the 3,564 squares and combining them to create a view of the artwork that is not possible in its space.

The posters are being offered as premiums to those who join the Friends of the Princeton Public Library at the highest membership level during the group's annual membership drive.

Funds raised by the Friends pay for half of the library's budget for books and two-thirds of the budget for other library materials. The Friends also fund programming at the library, including author visits, summer reading clubs and homework help.

MCCC Exhibit Features Work by Princeton Artists

Eleven Princeton artists were selected for inclusion in the "Mercer County Artists" exhibit at the Mercer County Community College gallery through April 1. Pictured is the work of Elizabeth Peck ("Winter Scene," a watercolor) and Ruth Reese ("Reds and Black Dots," metal, paper, and wood).

Forty-eight works of art by 47 artists who live, work or study in Mercer County were selected for this year's annual Mercer County Artists 2005 exhibition. The exhibit began February 28 in The Gallery at Mercer County Community College. The winners of this year's Juror's Awards, Purchase Prizes, and the 3rd Annual West Windsor Arts Council award were announced at an opening reception on March 9.

This year's juror, Donna Gustafson, selected a strong assortment of two- and three-dimensional pieces, representing many different media and approaches to the art-making process. Ms. Gustafson, director of exhibitions at the Hunterdon Museum of Art, and former chief curator for the American Federation of the Arts in Manhattan, selected the artworks from more than 210 pieces submitted by artists this year.

Artists from Princeton include: Al Aronson; Jennifer Cadoff; Charles and Lucy Graves McVicker; Victoria Chu Moy; Kensuke Okabayashi; Ted and Elizabeth Peck; Ruth Reese; John Murdoch; and Judy Tobie.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Evening hours include Wednesday, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and Thursdays, 7 to 9 p.m.

"OF FIRE AND WATER": The work of sculptor Isaac Witkin is featured in a new show at the Rider University Art Gallery. "Out of the Crucible: Images of Fire and Water" opened March 3 and will be on display through April 10 at the gallery on the Rider University campus at 2083 Lawrenceville Road in Lawrenceville. The gallery itself is located on the third floor of the Bart Luedeke Center. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Thursday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. For more information, visit <http://www.rider.edu/~gallery>, or call (609) 895-5588.

"GLIMPSE OF YELLOWSTONE AND YOSEMITE": Majestic shots by photographer Martin Schwartz of the two monumental national parks make up a new show at Gallery 14 in Hopewell. Schwartz's show, "Glimpse of Yellowstone and Yosemite," will run simultaneously with another photography show, "Hieroglyphs," by Nick Barberio. Both shows will open with a reception this Friday, March 18, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Hopewell Gallery Offers Perspective in New Shows

Gallery 14 in Hopewell will open two new exhibits this Friday, March 18: "Hieroglyphs" by Nick Barberio, and "Glimpse of Yellowstone and Yosemite" by Martin Schwartz. Both exhibits will open with a reception for the public on the 18th from 6 to 9 p.m., with both shows slated to continue through April 17.

You may meet the photographers and discuss their work on Sunday, March 20, between 1 and 3 p.m.

In his show, "Hieroglyphs," Barberio, a resident of both Princeton and New York City, explores the "relationship of word and image in the context of making meaning." The images in the show are meant to express an idea, emotion, or nothing at all, the artist added.

Barberio's photography is influenced by architectural drawing and often imitates two-dimensional floor plans and elevations as if they were blueprints for the real world frozen in time. "I consider my work a process of capturing reality and returning to its origins as an idea, as if a fleeting moment in time had been meticulously drawn out and planned", he states.

In addition to art and commercial photography, Barberio works as a researcher at the Costume Institute in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Locally, he has worked at the Princeton Art Museum, McCarter Theater, and as a teacher at Princeton Adult School. His previous exhibitions include two shows at the Tribeca gallery space of Steven Harris Architects in New York City. The first, from 2003, "Reconnaissance," was done in response to being mistaken as a terrorist while taking pictures; the second, from 2004, was titled "Mimesis: Reflections on Reflection." For more information on Barberio or images of his work, visit <http://www.nickbarberio.com>.

Martin Schwartz

Schwartz first visited Yellowstone National Park in the summer of 2003 and Yosemite for the first time this past summer. He decided that he had waited too long to visit there and hopes to be able to return in the near future. It is not necessary to extol the beauty of these two parks, it has all been said. "I can only say if you have not been, go and if you have been, return," he notes.

Many photographers have photographed these parks. Some have spent their whole professional life shooting images of their awe-inspiring scenery, but with Schwartz, the intention was to shoot intimate landscapes, scenes small in scope that capture the essence of the site. This was possible in Yellowstone since there is such a tremendous variation in the park. There is a combination of landscapes, wildlife, and, because of the volcanic activity that is responsible for this landscape, many small intimate subjects as well. Yellowstone, however, is just overwhelming with its monumental formations; it is hard not to just keep looking up and being awed by this park.

This was the first project in which he has not used film. All the images were shot with a digital Nikon D100. In the show, they are presented in prints scaled to the character of the subject.

There will be a "Meet the Photographers," event this Sunday, March 20, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Gallery 14 is located at 14 Mercer Street in Hopewell. Gallery hours are Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m., and by appointment. For more information, visit <http://www.photosgallery14.com> or call (609) 333-8511.

Upcoming Peddie Exhibit Features Acclaimed Artist

The Community Arts Partnership at the Peddie School (CAPPS) will close its 2004-2005 Mariboe Gallery Series with an exhibit of work by Ross Bleckner, from April 1 through April 15.

An opening reception and gallery talk will be held April 1 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Bleckner's work is exhibited, collected, and written about around the globe and has secured a place in the art history of the late 20th and early 21st century. In an article in Art Forum, David Carrier writes that "Ross Bleckner's art has been variously interpreted, much celebrated, yet not entirely understood — in short, it has struck a nerve... Slipping easily between the cosmological and the microscopic, Bleckner's view of the material substance of the world appears to belong to either end of the telescope of time."

Carrier added that Bleckner's work is technically sophisticated, and "highly stylized" while maintaining a primal and romantic aura. Much of his work has been seen as political in nature, bringing issues of HIV and AIDS to the cultural forefront during the 1980s. At the same time, he

"SHOWING ONE'S COLOURS": This 1986 Annette Lemieux oil-on-glass with oval frames piece will be featured in a new show, "Some Art of the 80s" at the Princeton University Art Museum beginning this Saturday, March 19. The show attempts to display examples of relatively recent works, as the actual era from which they were created enters the annals of art history.

PU Art Museum Gives a Nod To a Bygone Artistic Era

A new show at the Princeton University Art Museum that examines the increasing awareness of, and response to a heightened commodity culture will be on view at the at the gallery at McCormick Hall on the University campus from March 19 through June 12.

"Some Art of the 80s" does not aim to present a neat survey of the period nor does it claim to have found the golden thread uniting work by the nearly 20 artists represented here, said museum spokesperson Ruta Smithson, rather, the intention is to provide a space for reflection upon recent art, distanced by two decades, at the moment it has begun to enter art history books.

"Artists' reactions ranged from complicity to overt critique (often purposefully confusing these distinctions), but their shared urge was to address, using a range of "postmodern" tactics, the ways in which subjectivity, life-style, consumption, sexuality, and institutions—from museums to marriage—were constructed in relation to consumable signs," writes Johanna Burton, a doctoral candidate in the University's Department of Art and Archaeology, who organized the exhibition.

One particularly effective artistic mode of the 1980s was "appropriation," where artists took images from high art or popular culture and represented them to make underscore their socio-historical context.

One artist, Louise Lawler, whose work will be featured in the show, famously detailed artworks as they appeared in collectors' homes, like so many tasteful arrangements displaying wealth, knowledge, and sense.

The title of the exhibition is taken from a collaborative work produced in 1984 by Lawler and Allan McCollum that highlighted strategies of desire and displayed them by offering a number of identical, if totally useless, objects.

The exhibition, which draws from the museum's holdings and from private collections, includes 18 of the period's most influential artists, such as Lawler, Sherrie Levine, and Cindy Sherman. Often referred to as a time when representation itself was in "crisis," the art of the 80s now offers a glimpse of art — production that took such movements as Dada, Pop, Institutional Critique, and Conceptualism as predecessors — while giving clues to the kinds of work produced today.

The decade of the 1980s, while relatively recent, is in the process of being newly revisited by scholars of both art and culture. In addition, because postmodern theory roughly coincides with work from the late 1970s and early 1980s, that theoretical-artistic crossroads is being newly reconsidered today.

The Princeton University Art Museum is open to the public without charge Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. Highlights tours of the collection are given every Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m. For more information, visit <http://www.princetonartmuseum.org>, or call (609) 258-3788.

Childrens Courses Focus On Being "Almost Human"

Two full-day courses for children age 7 to 11 that explore the boundaries between people and created materials such as toys and machines were inspired by an exhibit, currently on display at the Hunterdon Museum of Art. "Almost Human: Dolls and Robots in Contemporary Art," has resulted in a program that is geared to put children in an imaginative setting as they get an opportunity to express themselves artistically.

The first course, "Rod Puppets," will be held on Wednesday, March 30th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Students in this course will create a rod puppet of his or her favorite character from tales told by instructor and professional storyteller Rebecca Kelly. Using fabric, clay and buttons, students will fashion their own puppet. Tuition is $70 for non-members and $60 for members.

The second course, "Paper People," will be held the following day on Thursday, March 31, also from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Students will make moveable three-dimensional paper figures including acrobats, clowns, tightrope walkers, jumping jacks, and dancing ladies. Following the lead of Alexander Calder's magical video Circus, children will put on a three-ring show of their own. Tuition is $70 for non-members and $60 for members.

Children are encouraged to bring their imagination, and of course, their own lunch and snacks.

To register for either workshop, call the museum at (908) 735-8415, ext 16. Also, the opening reception for the "Almost Human" exhibition will be held on Sunday, March 20 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Hunterdon Museum of Art. A performance, "Chance Transmission: An i-Ching Reading with Two Small Robots," will also take place at 1 p.m. by artists Eva Sutton and Sarah Hart.

During its fifty years in the community, the non-profit Hunterdon Museum of Art has celebrated the achievements of New Jersey artists as well as those from outside the state with exhibitions of contemporary art. Museum gallery and shop hours are Tuesday through Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Suggested admission to the museum is $3.

One of Princeton's great ladies, Helen Craven, died on February 19, 2005. I am deeply grateful to Helen for telephoning me in June, 1983: "Juliana, I'm calling to ask you to start a school with me." From that moment on, I was hooked by Helen's extraordinary charm, style and wisdom.

Barbara Johnson wrote a tribute to Helen in Town Topics in 1991. The following excerpts capture a glimpse of Helen's colorful character:

"Mrs. Craven's gifts in dealing with very young children, her kindness, gentleness and patience... her disposition for hard work... her perseverance and diligence... the outlets in which she greeted children each morning... the costumes such as the lithe, leotarded Halloween cat, or the red and white balloon Valentine headdress... she was funny, wise and gutsy, yet soothing as a dove... charming and universally liked... forthright, honest... generous, a model of frugality... inquisitive... adaptable... came by teaching naturally... Her father founded a school in Suzhou, China. Her mother started the first Kindergarten in the city, where Mrs. Craven got her first experience working with young children. She came to the U.S. in 1927 at age 15... gained her first experience in nursery school administration... at the University League... also taught at the Princeton Nursery School and Miss Mason's School... Mrs. Craven formed a Board of Trustees and got Princeton Junior School incorporated as a non-profit. She asked Mrs. McIntyre to be headmistress, and together the two women handled all the administration in addition to teaching... creating the family feeling that makes Princeton Junior School so unique... a warm loving environment along with a first rate academic program."

Princeton Junior School may outlive Helen Craven but it will never lose her sense of adventure and celebration that inspired this School into being. To put her departure into her vernacular: "Goodbye, darlin'... I've had a wonderful time!"

Berlind Schedules The World Premiere Of Prokofiev Ballet

One of the great "lost" ballets of the 20th century, Le Pas d'Acier (The Steel Step) by Sergei Prokofiev, will be brought to life exactly as Prokofiev intended in three performances at the Berlind Theatre on April 7, 8, and 9 at 8 p.m.

"This is essentially a world premiere because the ballet was never performed the way Prokofiev conceived it," said Princeton University assistant professor of music Simon Morrison, the leader of the recreation project, which has taken three years. Prof. Morrison heads a group of scholars from Princeton and other institutions who have worked to recreate the choreography, costumes, and elaborate mechanical set of the ballet, which has not been performed since 1931.

The full-scale production will feature the Princeton University Orchestra, 30 dancers from Princeton, an original set, and custom-made costumes.

Among the most popular composers of the 20th century, Prokofiev is the author of such classics as Peter and the Wolf and Cinderella. The little-known Pas d'Acier was written as a dramatic tale about factory life after the Russian Revolution, a celebration of Soviet industrialization that Prokofiev hoped would endear him to Russian authorities. But budget constraints and a change in choreographers led to a scaled-down version of the ballet being performed in Paris in 1927 by the Ballets Russes. That version mocked industrial development instead of lauding it.

"Pas d'Acier caused a political scandal when it debuted in 1927 because it ended up as a satire of Soviet society," said Prof. Morrison.

The set, created with the help of theater historian Lesley-Anne Sayers, is a replica of the one originally planned for the ballet by Georgi Yakoulov. It is a stylized mechanical world of brightly colored spinning wheels, gears, levers, and a rotating conveyor belt representing factory life. An eight-foot-tall replica of a train that emits steam from its funnel will come into view partway through the ballet.

The choreography has been recreated using action cues and stage direction from the original musical score as well as drawings and photos discovered by Ms. Sayers in archives in Paris, London, and Armenia.

The dancers will be drawn from a contemporary dance class taught by ballet reconstructionist Millicent Hodson, who is a visiting fellow of the Humanities Council, and Rebecca Lazier, a lecturer in the Humanities Council and theater and dance.

The University Orchestra will be under the direction of Michael Pratt.

Opera Theater Guild Sets Planning Meeting

The newly formed New Jersey Opera Theater Guild will meet on Monday, March 28 at 7 p.m. in the Community Room of the Plainsboro Library to welcome new members and set an agenda for the coming year.

The Guild is a not-for-profit organization set up to connect NJOT with people who love opera and want to help NJOT bring opera to audiences throughout New Jersey. New members are welcome.

The purpose of the Guild is to establish continuity of volunteer support for NJOT's educational outreach and emerging artists programs. Volunteers assist with housing guest artists, hospitality, transportation, and publicity. The Guild envisions a number of member-only events such as informal lectures and group visits to opera in New York and Philadelphia. Members may also attend NJOT master classes for a nominal fee.

MUSIC REVIEW

New Jersey Symphony Presents Piano Legend After Thirty Year Absence from Princeton Area

The New Jersey Symphony Orchestra has been good to women conductors this year. To add to its commitment to high quality performances and expanding New Jersey audiences, the orchestra has presented several women on the podium, a refreshing change in a field in which women often have trouble getting "the big break." The third of these, Kerilyn Wilson, led the orchestra Friday night at Richardson Auditorium in a rich program of Mendelssohn, Prokofiev, and Brahms.

The road is not often easy for women conductors, but Ms. Wilson has built a diverse career in both symphonic and operatic repertoire here and abroad. Her command of the ensemble on Friday night was decisive, as she set the mood for the piece with her gestures, while allowing the players to take care of the fine details themselves. Her upbeat to the opening of Mendelssohn's Overture, The Hebrides (also known as Fingal's Cave), immediately set the tone of the work, and despite Ms. Wilson not always being the most relaxed of conductors, the music flowed. Ms. Wilson's conducting style well suited the martial section of the overture, but the lighter sections of the piece could have paid more homage to their classical roots. Throughout, all instruments spoke cleanly and evenly, with especially crisp horns and trumpets. Clarinetist Karl Herman was also notable in his smooth solo playing.

Ms. Wilson studied conducting with a legend from Juilliard who is also at the Curtis Institute, Otto Werner Mueller, and Curtis has turned out numerous fine instrumentalists, some of whom are almost certainly in the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. Thus it was fitting that the orchestra's presentation of Prokofiev's Piano Concerto No. 4 for the left hand featured another Curtis legend, pianist Gary Graffman, who is also director of the school. Mr. Graffman had established a renowned career as a concert pianist before, an injury to his right hand afforded him a second career in the concert piano repertoire for the left hand. Mr. Graffman had not performed with the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra in almost 30 years, an unfortunate loss all these years to Princeton audiences.

By ear alone, one would never have known that there was anything unusual at all about Mr. Graffman's playing of this concerto. He played the opening vivace with the lightness of Mozart, and easily maneuvered within the range of this concerto which used the full stretch of the keyboard. Like an athlete, Mr. Graffman used his right hand for balance and strength, and used his more than 40 years of concert experience to balance his playing precisely in timbre and timing with the orchestra. Ms. Wilson kept meticulous track of all the players, and, even with the considerable distance between instruments, orchestral and pianistic effects were perfectly timed.

The Brahms Serenade No. 1, which closed the program, is unlike the serenades of his predecessors. With six movements, this work is more like a symphony, and Ms. Wilson took full advantage of all the possible orchestral colors. Dynamically, the sound never stayed still as Ms. Wilson brought out the pastoral effect. Winds came to the forefront in this work, especially the clarinets and bassoons, and the horns were precise in their opening calls as well as their agility in the closing rondo.

The NJSO seems to have incorporated a new feature into their performances, with various instrumentalists talking to the audience just as the concert is about to begin. Not a pre-concert lecture (which would be welcome in Princeton), the brief "chat" on Friday night from one of the cellists and Ms. Wilson, seemed to have no purpose other than to kill some time before late-comers arrived. There was little information conveyed that was not in the program, and once the concert began, the high quality of the instrumentalists' performance spoke for itself. If the orchestra was seeking to bridge the distance between performer and audience, a discussion with Mr. Graffman and Ms. Wilson on their careers (especially Mr. Graffman's experiences) would have been of much more interest to an audience which had gone too long without hearing this extraordinary pianist.

Four Teens to Compete For Symphony's Awards

Four 16-year-old musicians from New Jersey will compete for awards totaling $20,000, and for the honor of performing as a soloist with the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra in its 30th annual Young Artists Auditions Awards concert on Sunday, April 3, at New Brunswick's State Theatre at 3 p.m.

The concert will be led by conductor Thomas Wilkins, an advocate for the development of young concert artists.

The finalists are violinist Jerry Chiu and pianist Steven Lin, both of East Brunswick; pianist Christine Kim of Ridgewood; and cellist Deborah Pae of Livingston. Pianist Jeanette Auferio of Saddle River received an Honorable Mention Award.

The first-place winner will receive the $10,000 Henry Lewis Award in recognition of the late NJSO music director who founded the Young Artists Auditions in 1975. The winner will also get the opportunity to perform with the NJSO in March 2006.

The second-place winner will receive the $5,000 Judy Nachison Award; the third-place winner, the $3,000 NJSO League Volunteer Award; and the fourth-place winner, the $2,000 Conductor's Award.

Mr. Chiu was born in Taipei,

Taiwan, and began studying music at the age of four. At the age of 11 he was accepted into the Juilliard Pre-College Division where he studied violin. He has won numerous competitions in Taiwan and in the U.S., most recently this year's Shing-Tien Kong biannual national competition in Taiwan.

Ms. Kim started playing the piano at the age of six. A student at the Korean National University of Arts Pre-College program and now in the Juilliard Pre-College Division, she is currently a sophomore at Ridgewood High School.

Recent Works for Piano On Westminster Program

Pianist Marvin Rosen, a member of the Westminster Conservatory faculty, will present a recital this Saturday, March 19, at 8 p.m. in Westminster's Bristol Chapel entitled The Ink is Still Wet. The program will be devoted to music composed during the last ten years. Included will be works from Australia, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Estonia, Japan,

New Zealand, Slovakia, and the United States.

The performances of many of the works will be American premieres.

Mr. Rosen earned his bachelor's degree in music and music education from Trenton State College, his master's degree in musicology from the Manhattan School of Music, and his doctorate in Music Education in 1985 from Teachers College, Columbia University. From 1979 to 1982 he was first a piano pedagogy student and later a staff member at the New School for Music Study in Kingston. He has given a lecture-recital on American music at the Karłowicz Music School in Katowice, Poland, and a recital at the Szustra Palace in Warsaw. In 1998 he performed at the Phillips Collection in Washington D.C. Since 1997 he has been the host of the weekly radio program, Classical Discoveries, on WPRB (103.3 FM) and also hosted an oldies show during the summers of 2000 and 2001 on the station. He is currently a full-time faculty member at the Westminster Conservatory of Music.

Admission for the performance is $10 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. Tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance by calling the Westminster box office weekdays between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. at (609) 921-2663.

Paul Winter Consort In Earth Day Concert

The Community Arts Partnership at the Peddie School (CAPPS) will host the Grammy Award winning saxophonist and composer, Paul Winter and the Paul Winter Consort on Friday, April 22, at 8 p.m. in Peddie's Mount-Burke Theater. The Earth Day performance will be part of a residency in which Mr. Winter will perform for 2,000 children in area schools and offer a free workshop for adults, "Adventures in Music-Making."

A bandleader, composer, and founder of Living Music, Paul Winter has created an award-winning body of work that transcends categories, reflecting his wide-ranging experiences in the musical traditions and natural environments of the earth. He has performed over 2,000 concerts in concert halls of the Americas, Europe and Asia; in major cathedrals such as Washington's National Cathedral, Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, and New York's St. John the Divine; and in the White House, the Grand Canyon, Israel's Negev Desert, and the palace of the Crown Prince of Japan.

CAPPS will offer school-day performances at Peddie, where students from the East Windsor Regional School District will attend the one-hour "One on One" performances free of charge. "We hope this experience will broaden the understanding of Earth Day and expand young people's minds to build on 'Reduce, Reuse and Recycle,'" said

Robert Rund, Executive Director of CAPPS.

In recognition of his musical contributions to the environment, Mr. Winter has received a Global 500 Award from the United Nations, the Award of Excellence from the United Nations Environment Program, the Joseph Wood Krutch Medal for service to animals from the United States Humane Society, and the Peace Abbey's Courage of Conscience Award, among others.

The free workshop will be held on Saturday morning, April 23, from 9 a.m. to noon. "This workshop is open to as many as 200 participants from our community," said Mr. Rund. "Paul invites all who are interested, regardless of their musical knowledge or experience. The only requisite is that you must bring a musical instrument in order to participate."

Tickets for the April 22 performance are reserved and $15. For more information on this or other CAPPS events, call (609) 490-7SS0 or e-mail capps@peddie.org.

"Beauty and The Beast" Ballet at State Theatre

New Brunswick's State Theatre will present the American Repertory Ballet in Beauty and the Beast and A Midsummer Night's Dream, with music by Felix Mendelssohn, for one night only on Wednesday, April 13, at 7 p.m. The choreography will be by Graham Lustig, costumes by A. Christina Gianninni, and lighting by Alexander V. Nichols.

The program is suggested for family audiences ages 10 and up.

Adapted from the original story by Madame Le Prince de Beaumont, the ballet of Beauty and The Beast is set in early 19th century New Jersey and is dedicated by the choreographer to the Garden State.

Mr. Lustig's creative staging of William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream begins with the marital spat of the King and Queen of the Fairies, Oberon and Titania. At the heart of their quarrel is the custody of a beautiful child. "Not for thy fairy kingdom," answers Titania to Oberon's request. Not happy with this answer, Oberon sends his servant Puck on a mission of revenge, planning to cause Titania to fall in love with a beast, then hold the antidote ransom in exchange for the child they both covet.

An award winning choreographer, Mr. Lustig's ballets have been performed on four continents. Since joining ARB in 1999 he has set his productions of Cinderella, Borderlines, The Shrew, Cudenzo, Pos De Pizozz, and Paromire for the company.

ARB and its affiliate Princeton Ballet School are both maintained by the Princeton Ballet Society. The Princeton Ballet School, founded in 1954 by Audree Estey, is one of the largest not-for-profit dance schools in the nation. It enrolls 1,500 students annually for classes in its studios in Princeton, Cranbury, and New Brunswick.

For tickets, call the State Theatre box office at (732) 246-7469 or toll free at (877) STATE-11.

Passage Theatre Slates "Vocal Magician" in April

Trenton's Passage Theatre will present two events by the "vocal magician" Yurl Lane, From Tel Aviv to Romoloh, a hip-hop performance piece set in the West Bank on Saturday, April 9 at 8 p.m., and King Solomon Builds the Temple, an interactive show for children ages 5 to 10 on Sunday, April 10 at 3 p.m.

Mr. Lane describes From Tel Aviv to Romoloh as a hip-hop travelogue of peace. Inspired by his own travels in the Middle East, the show tells the story of two young men, one Israeli and one Palestinian, as they go about their ordinary days in which extraordinary events have been common.

His children's piece, King Solomon Builds the Temple, tells the story of King Solomon's legendary connection to animals, communicated with a hip-hop beat. Using an interactive music format that invites children to participate, Mr. Lane tells how King Solomon enlisted the help of the animal kingdom to build the first temple. A raven, a donkey, a snake, and a shmir silkworm all pitch in, and children leave with a greater understanding of the tale of communication and cooperation.

Called "an acrobat with sound" by The Washington Post, Mr. Lane produces a virtual symphony of hip-hop rhythm using just his voice and a microphone. "Lane's colorful depiction is so real, his characters so well developed, you can't help but be moved," said The San Francisco Examiner.

Tickets for From Tel Aviv to Romoloh are $20, $16 for Passage Theatre members, and $15 for students. Tickets for King Solomon Builds the Temple are $10 for adults, $8 for Passage Theatre members, and $5 for children. To order, call (609) 392-0766, or visit the theatre's website at www.passagetheatre.org.

The Mill Hill Playhouse is located at the intersection of Front and Montgomery Streets in Trenton. Free parking is available across the street from the theatre.

State Theatre Schedules Wells' "The Invisible Man"

The London and New York-based Aquila Theatre Company will present a new stage version of H.G. Wells' The Invisible Man at New Brunswick's State Theatre on Thursday, April 7 at 8 p.m. All tickets are $16.

One of the pioneers of modern science fiction, H.G. Wells wrote in England in the late 19th and early 20th century. His works made daring predictions about the state of humanity in the face of rapid developments in modern science and the consequential changes in society. His work provided the inspiration for Orson Welles' 1938 radio broadcast of The War of the Worlds. In 1933, he collaborated with filmmaker Alexander Korda on the movie The Shape of Things to Come, which predicted the warfare of World War II. His The Time Machine, The Island of Dr. Moreau and The Invisible Man have all become movie classics.

The Aquila Theatre Company's new stage version of The Invisible Man is based closely on the 1897 novel of the same name. Set in Victorian London and rural southern England, it tells the story of a talented young English scientist named Griffin who is obsessed with the notion of invisibility and tries to put his theories into practice. The play examines what it means to be human and how fragile modern society can be.

Aquila was founded in 1991 in London by Peter Meinick to present innovative productions of classical drama. The company has toured extensively throughout the United States, Canada, and Europe, with regular seasons in both New York and London. It is currently the professional company in residence at New York University's Center for Ancient Studies, teaching a studio program in acting at the Tisch School of the Arts.

The school performance for The Invisible Man on Thursday, April 7 at 10:30 a.m. is sold out.

For tickets, call the State Theatre box office at (732) 246-7469 or (877) STATE-11.

The State Theatre is located at 15 Livingston Avenue, New Brunswick.

Russian National Ballet Coming to State Theatre

The Russian National Ballet Theatre will bring the romantic story of Sleeping Beauty to the stage of the State Theatre on Saturday, April 2 at 8 p.m. The production will feature choreography by Marius Petipa and the music of Piotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky.

The Russian National Ballet Theatre was founded in 1999 to present both classical and modern dance. With the support of the Ministry of Culture of the Russian Federation, the company was brought together by its general director Vladimir Moiseev and artistic director Evgeny Amosov. Its corps de ballet numbers 55 dancers ranging in age from 17 to 25 years.

The program will include a pre-performance "Insight" at 7 p.m. at The United Methodist Church with speaker Mary Pat Robertson. Her talk will help place the ballet in its historic context and examine what classicism means in relation to ballet.

Tickets are $45, $35, $28, and $18. To order, call the State Theatre at (732) 246-7469 or (877) STATE-11.

Dale Warland

Dale Warland to Conduct Symphonic Choir in April

The 100-voice Westminister Symphonic Choir will perform a program of contemporary choral works on Thursday, April 7 at 8 p.m. in the Princeton University Chapel, under the baton of the noted conductor Dale Warland.

Entitled A Choral Mosaic: Music of Our Time, the program will include Howard Hanson's A Prayer for the Middle Ages; Arvo Pärt's Magnificat; Henryk Górecki's Amen; Stephen Paulus' We Gather Together, and Vincent Persichetti's Flower Songs.

Mr. Warland is widely known in the world of contemporary choral music. During his time with the Dale Warland Singers, he shaped a vocal ensemble known for its technical finesse and stylistic range. From this platform, he introduced 270 new choral works from more than 150 composers. He has appeared as a guest conductor with the Swedish Radio Choir, Danish Radio Choir, Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Estonian Philharmonic Chamber Choir, Opus 7 Vocal Ensemble, the Utah Chamber Artists, the Grant Park Music Festival, and Israel's Cameran Singers, among others. He also served for 19 years as director of choral music at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn.

Composed of upper-class and graduate students at Westminister Choir College, the Westminister Symphonic Choir has recorded and performed with major orchestras under many internationally known conductors during the last 75 years. Recognized as one of the world's leading choral ensembles, the choir has sung over 300 performances with the New York Philharmonic alone. Its 2004-05 season includes performances with the Dresden Philharmonic and New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. With the New York Philharmonic it will perform Handel's Messiah and Ravel's Daphnis et Chloë. It will also perform Daphnis et Chloë with the Princeton Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mark Laycock, in April.

Tickets are $30, $20 and $15. For tickets or more information call (609) 921-2663.

"Pretty Fire" to Replace "Second Line" at Passage

Trenton's Passage Theatre has announced that its previously scheduled production of the world premiere of Seret Scott's Second Line has been postponed until next season. In its place, the theatre will present Pretty Fire by Charlayne Woodard, winner of the Los Angeles Theatre Critics Award and the NAACP Theatre Award for Best Play, from April 14 to 24 at the Mill Hill Playhouse.

Pretty Fire will star Linda Kennedy, best known for her two decades of work with the St. Louis Black Repertory Company. She is a ten-time Woodie Award winner, and has appeared in more than 40 productions at the St. Louis Black Rep and other major theatres. The show will be directed by Elizabeth Van Dyke, who previously starred in the Passage production of Zora Neale Hurston and developed the premiere of Welcome Home, Morion Anderson.

Inspired by the life of playwright Charlayne Woodard, Pretty Fire had its New York premiere at the Manhattan Theatre Club in 1993. It tells the story of Ms. Woodard's childhood, which was split between her home in Albany, New York, and her grandmother's farm in Rosignol Hill, Georgia. The five vignettes offer a complex look at an African-American childhood where racism exists but is not the dominant force. The New York Times called it "exhilarating and unflaggingly entertaining, one of the most positive pictures of the black-American experience ever seen on stage."

Performances will be Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., and Sundays at 5 p.m. Free parking is available across the street from the theatre.

Tickets are $28, with discounts available for students, seniors, and groups. Early Bird single tickets are available for $25 but must be purchased by April 8.

The Mill Hill Playhouse is located at the intersection of Front and Montgomery Streets in Trenton.

CINEMA REVIEW

Robots

Robin Williams Steals the Show in Futuristic Animated Adventure

In 2002, Chris Wedge and Carlos Saldanha co-directed Ice Age, a charming animated adventure revolving around prehistoric creatures which included a woolly mammoth, a sloth and saber-toothed tigers. They have collaborated on another computer-generated family film that is set in the future in a world inhabited entirely by robots.

The filmmakers assembled a talented cast of voices for the animated characters that includes Halle Berry, Jim Broadbent, Mel Brooks, Dianne Wiest, Robin Williams, James Earl Jones, and Greg Kinnear. The movie also features the distinct voices of well-known character actors Paul Giamatti, Stanley Tucci, Jennifer Coolidge, Ewan McGregor, and Dan Hedaya; as well as popular network TV icons Drew Carey, Amanda Byers, Al Roker, Jay Leno, Carson Daly, D.L. Hughley, Jamie Kennedy, Conan O'Brien, and Terry Bradshaw.

Out of the cacophony of all these colorful accents competing for attention, it is Robin Williams' trademark stream-of-consciousness which emerges as the driving force for the film. In accordance with the current formula for animated films made for children, the hero is on an epic journey accompanied by a scene-stealing, wisecracking sidekick. Shrek had Eddie Murphy as his tag-along donkey; Finding Nemo had Ellen DeGeneres as a forgetful fish; The Emperor's New Groove had David Spade as a llama; Billy Crystal performed the same sort of function in Monsters' Inc.; and Will Smith was in Shrek.

The story starts in Rivet Town where an enterprising robot named Rodney Copperbottom (Ewan McGregor), inspired by his idol, Bigweld (Mel Brooks), bids his parents farewell, and sets out for Robot City to find work as an apprentice at Bigweld's factory.

Unbeknownst to Rodney, Phineas T. Ratchet (Greg Kinnear) has wrested control of the company from Bigweld, in order to carry out a diabolical plot to maximize profits by no longer manufacturing spare robot parts. Mandatory upgrades, instead of repairs, will spell doom for most of the aging robot kingdom.

Out of a job, Rodney is befriended by Fender (Robin Williams), leader of the Rusties, a renegade gang that hangs out on the outskirts of town. Can these almost obsolete mechanical beings team-up to change the course of history before they all end up on the scrap heap?

Children will appreciate the realistic animation, and their parents will enjoy the allusions to The Wizard of Oz, Singing in the Rain, James Bond, Analyze This, Jaws, and Road Trip.

The picture has few product placements, which is a departure from the norm for children's fare. It is welcomed, since we've come to expect children's movies to be laced with cross promotions and sales pitches.

Very Good (★★★). Rated PG for mild epithets and suggestive humor. Running time: 90 minutes. Distributor: 20th Century Fox.

Goldberg Makes Noise With 3-Goal Effort As Tiger Women's Lax Improves to 2-0

With the Princeton University women's lacrosse team trailing Loyola 4-1 after just six minutes last Sunday, Tiger senior attacker Ingrid Goldberg knew it was time to speak up.

"The seniors in general are more responsible for keeping everybody's head on straight," said Goldberg, who scored a first-half goal to help Princeton claw back to an 8-8 tie by halftime.

"We had to keep everybody's mentality high. Communication is one of the big things in the game, it's very easy to shut your mouth at a time like that. We were telling the younger players there are 50 minutes left, get it back, things like that."

When Princeton found itself behind the Greyhounds 9-8 early in the second half, Goldberg let her stick do the talking. She scored two goals to help spark a 6-0 Princeton run as the second-ranked Tigers pulled away to a 15-11 victory over 11th-ranked Loyola at a windy, sun-splashed Class of 1952 Stadium.

A beaming Goldberg was proud of the mentality the Tigers demonstrated in improving to 2-0 on the season. "We pulled together, our team is usually a strong second half team," said the affable Goldberg, who is called "Iggy" by her teammates. "Colleen O'Boyle, our second goalie, came and stepped up with a huge save. Our attack played solidly."

Goldberg, who scored 15 goals last season, downplayed her contribution to the Tiger attack. "Just take your shot," said Goldberg, in reflecting on her mindset during the second-half rally. "You know how to do it, you do it every single day in practice. Get it done."

With the Tigers having played in the last three straight NCAA title games, having won the crown in 2002 and 2003, Goldberg acknowledged that she and her teammates know that every opponent is gunning for them.

"We've played two really strong teams," said Goldberg, referring to Loyola and Johns Hopkins. "Both of the teams we have faced are in the Top 10. There is an aura around the Princeton Tigers and everyone comes out harder to beat us. We have to get up more for every game."

Princeton head coach Chris Sailer was pleased with how her team's defense got up in the second half. "We really picked it up," said Sailer, whose club held the Greyhounds to eight shots over the last 30 minutes of the contest.

"We started to make big stops. We started to play as a team more. We were sliding much better, seeing the play, and communicating. We were just so much more aware on defense. I thought that was a real turnaround."

MAKING STRIDES: Princeton sophomore midfielder Kathleen Miller, center, races up the field on her way to a two-goal effort in Princeton's opening day 9-6 victory over Johns Hopkins. Miller and her teammates will look to improve on their 2-0 record when they play at Duke on March 16 before hosting Penn State on March 19.

IGGY POP: Princeton University senior attacker Ingrid Goldberg, left, heads to the cage in Princeton's recent 9-6 win over Johns Hopkins. Last Saturday, Goldberg, nicknamed "Iggy" by her teammates, scored three goals as second-ranked Princeton overcame an early three-goal deficit in its 15-11 win over visiting Loyola.

Princeton's attack also got into a rhythm. "I thought we made a lot of progress on attack," said Sailer, whose senior star Lindsey Biles fired in a career-high six goals on the afternoon. "In the Hopkins game, it was all basically individual efforts we didn't have much of a flow on attack. Today we moved the ball much better, we were much more patient."

The prolific Biles certainly created much of the offensive flow. "She's a special player," said Sailer of the senior from Annapolis, Md., who scored 71 points last year and now has 130 goals in her Princeton career, the seventh most in program history.

"She is aware that a lot of firepower from the last couple of years is gone and that the focus is going to be on her. We need her posting those kind of numbers."

But as important as Biles is to Princeton's attack, the Tigers need supporting players like Goldberg to assume leading roles. "Iggy really stepped up, especially after we took her out in the first half," said Sailer, who got two goals apiece from Elizabeth Pillion and Courtney Bird and one each from Mary Minshall and Leigh Slonaker as her club won its 23rd straight regular season game.

"She came in with a lot more fire. She really started to make a difference on the field, she got a few shots in. We're counting on her. I've said it before, people like Iggy are the ones that are going to make or break this season."

Sailer hopes that her club's performance in the second half will be a harbinger of things to come this season. "I think the second half really did a lot for our confidence going into the week," said Sailer, whose team takes on two more top ten teams this week as it plays at Duke on March 16 before hosting Penn State on March 19. "It is so much better for our team to have this under our belts."

In Goldberg's view, the team's pre-season trip to Australia this past December helped it build the confidence to keep progressing. "In Australia, we played the national team three times and each game got better and better," recalled Goldberg, noting that Princeton lost the opener against the Aussies 18-2 and then finished the series by losing just 9-8.

"The experience showed us that we can improve every game, even against a team that is far superior. It also showed us that we can work together as a team and fix things. Our transition game can always get better. We'll just keep working on keeping the attack going at a good tempo."

With Goldberg making noise up front, the Tiger attack figures to set a torrid pace this spring.

Tiger Swim Star Hsiao Heading to NCAA Meet; Aiming to Make Waves in Final College Event

Soft-spoken and gracious, Stephanie Hsiao hardly seems rebellious. But when she came to Princeton University in 2001, the self-proclaimed hotshot from swimming hotbed Southern California thought she knew better than her Tiger coaches. Having been brought up in a club program that emphasized sprinting drills, Hsiao fought the distance work that's a staple of the Princeton approach. Hsiao suffered through a frustrating freshman season that saw her times stay static and her results fall short of her lofty expectations. Realizing that she had to adapt to thrive, Hsiao sat down with Princeton coach Susan Teeter before her sophomore season and pledged to buy into the Tiger system. Hsiao immediately started to realize her considerable potential, qualifying for the NCAA meet that year. In her junior season, she returned to the NCAA after winning three individual events at the Ivy League championship meet to help lead the Tigers to their fifth straight Ivy title. Later this week, Hsiao heads to West Lafayette, Ind. for her final NCAA meet. She comes into the competition as a hot swimmer, having dominated the 2005 Ivy meet in late February by claiming seven gold medals and setting three school records in the process. Before plunging into the pool last week for a training session, Hsiao grinned sheepishly as she reflected on the rocky start to her Princeton career.

"I came here and it was so different," said Hsiao, a native of Irvine, Calif., who was drawn to Princeton by the "more intense vibe" she sensed in the east coast lifestyle.

"I was reluctant to let go of my training. I just wasn't open-minded about adjusting to the training here. I think I tried to coach myself too much my freshman year." Once Hsiao gained trust in the Tiger system, her swimming experience resembled her early years in the sport. "At that point, I just really enjoyed swimming," said Hsiao, recalling her debut at age 10 in the Novaquatic program.

"I joined the club and formed friendships and then it became more about going to practice to see my friends. From there, you develop goals. It was natural for me; I can't imagine what I would've done without it."

Princeton coach Teeter believes that Hsiao's early struggles in college were a natural part of the maturing process. "Steph is such a hard worker," said Teeter, who laughs when she recalls Hsiao's so-called freshman "rebellion."

"Even with the different regimen, you could never have known that it was difficult for her. I think the main thing is that she started to grow up. She took disappointment and turned it into success. I think that's the sign of a true champion."

Hsiao gave the most graphic demonstration of her championship heart at the Ivy meet held at Princeton's DeNunzio Pool when she was named the meet's Most Outstanding Swimmer after taking individual titles in the 100 freestyle, 100 breaststroke, and 200 individual medley and helping the Tigers to victories in four relays (200 free, 400 free, 800 free, 200 medley).

"The first night, winning the medley really set the tone," said Hsiao, whose stunning individual effort wasn't enough to carry Princeton to the league title as the Tigers finished second to Harvard.

"I didn't expect to win all the events that I did, I was very fortunate. As a senior, you know what to expect and you have a certain confidence. You have that nervous energy before you swim in a race. It's just a matter of just getting up and doing it."

Teeter certainly enjoyed watching Hsiao get it done at the Ivy meet. "She's been such a great athlete for us and such a good person for this program and school," asserted Teeter, noting that Hsiao's mature approach as a team captain helped her teammates deal with the tragic death of Princeton men's swimmer Alan Ebersole last October.

"We just wanted her to win. Her 49.6 in the 100 free was one of the more remarkable swims I've witnessed in my coaching career. I loved seeing a kid like that have great success and get everything she deserves."

"She is a great competitor who knows how to race," added Teeter. "She loves being in that camaraderie and performing on behalf of the entire group. So when we go to the NCAA's, it's just her wearing orange and black. I know that she wants to swim than laughs from her Prince-well but there's that little ton experience. "There is so piece missing called family. much stuff I have learned They're not there going nuts interacting with Teeter and my teammates," asserted Hsiao,

No matter what happens at an East Asian studies major the NCAA meet, Hsiao has whose senior thesis delves into already put together a memo-the political role of sports in rable final campaign. "I'm China. really happy with how the sea- I've learned about leader-son has gone," said Hsiao, ship skills, talking to people, who will swim in the 50- and and how to communicate. I 100-free events at the NCAA learned when I need to ask for help and to trust in what I'm

"I've been telling everyone I doing." And Hsiao has earned the never had more fun than I did. I trust of her teammates as she think it was a great way for has put together one of the me to end the season, my last more remarkable careers in meet ever at DeNunzio. I've the program's history. never laughed so much on the deck with my teammates. We all swam fast and we didn't feel like we lost something."

Later this week, Hsiao will compete in 50- and 100-freestyle events at the NCAA championship meet in West Lafayette, Ind. At the Ivy League championship meet in late February, Hsiao won individual titles in the 100 free, 100 breaststroke, and 200 individual medley and helped the Tigers to victories in four relays — the 200 free, 400 free, 800 free, and 200 medley.

MARCH SADNESS: Princeton senior center Judson Wallace fires a hook shot over Penn's Steve Danley in the Tigers' 64-56 season-ending loss to the Quakers last week. The defeat left Princeton with an overall 15-13 record and a 6-8 mark in Ivy League play. The losing Ivy record is the program's first in league play which began in 1956-57.

Wallace Excited for Pro Hoops Tryout Camp As He Puts Frustrating Finale in Perspective

Judson Wallace's Princeton University basketball career ended on a sour note last week when the Tigers fell to archrival Penn.

For Wallace, though, the 64-56 loss to the Quakers, which culminated a frustrating season that saw Princeton post its first-ever losing season in Ivy League play, will not be the final chapter of his basketball life.

Next month, the 6'10" Wallace heads down to the Portsmouth Invitational in Virginia where he will vie with 63 other prospects to impress NBA scouts in the event where eight teams play four days of competition.

Wallace, a native of Atlanta, is hoping the trip south will help raise his pro stock. "I feel like my four years here have prepared me to take a chance at making the next level," said Wallace, who ended his Princeton career with 1,090 points, making him the program's 16th all-time leading scorer. "I'm excited about having a chance to prepare myself for this camp."

In addition, Wallace is determined to turn the page on his final college campaign. "Obviously we didn't play like we did last year when we went 13-1 in the league," said Wallace, reflecting on a season in which Princeton went 15-13 overall and 6-8 in Ivy play as it struggled to adjust to the style of new coach Joe Scott.

"I guess it was tough for everyone to make the transition. It sucks; we're the first Princeton team in over 50 years to have a losing Ivy record."

Coach Scott doesn't want anyone connected with Tiger program to forget the embarrassment of posting a losing Ivy campaign.

"I hope it sits there forever," asserted a raspy but subdued Scott. "I hope it's always a reminder. I hope the record is pinned on the wall somewhere. The players have to learn from this experience. They have to learn from how miserable we are."

The loss to league champion Penn exemplified Princeton's misery this season. With a Jadwin Gym crowd of 4,911 on hand for the March 8 battle, the Tigers fought back from an early 11-4 deficit to tie the game at 17-17.

Failing to pull ahead, Princeton kept the game close as it went into intermission trailing 32-29. In the second half, the Tigers fell behind 50-42 with 8:48 remaining before cutting the Penn lead to 53-51 with 2:41 left in regulation.

Unable to get over the hump, Princeton dropped a 64-56 decision with Wallace scoring a team-high 12 points and classmates Will Venable and Andre Logan each chipping in 11 in their finales.

Scott lamented his club's failure to seize opportunity when it knocked. "We struggled all game to get the lead," explained Scott. "There were four or five times where the lead was there to take and we missed a foul shot or a lay-up. We had our chances to take the lead but we didn't take advantage. We were just missing something tonight."

The loss hurt even more since it came before a crowd hoping to celebrate Senior Night with Princeton sending Penn into the NCAA tourney with just its second loss in the last 17 games of the season.

"I'm disappointed for our seniors," said Scott, whose group of seniors also included Mike Stephens and Jon Berger.

"The seniors have kept playing this year and I think that they have played half-way decent basketball down the stretch. I was hoping that tonight that we'd do it again in their last game. We didn't play one of our better games."

Venable, who passed the 1,000 point mark in his career when he scored the first basket of the Penn game, echoed Scott's sentiments.

"Obviously, we didn't play that well," said Venable, who averaged 10.5 points, 4.0 rebounds, 3.1 assists and 1.9 steals per game this season and was named as a second-team All-Ivy performer after the season. "We couldn't get anything going. We didn't take advantage of things; I'm pretty disappointed in that."

For Wallace, the disappointment of the finale and the last two months of the season made it hard for him to savor the positives of his Princeton career.

"Obviously, going to the tournament last year was a big highlight and the friendships I made with players and coaches," said Wallace, who was named as an honorable mention All-Ivy performer after averaging a team-high 12.2 points and 4.9 rebounds.

HAIR-RAISING EXPERIENCE: Princeton sophomore forward Luke Owings, right, battles Penn's Ibrahim Jaaber for the ball in Princeton's 64-56 defeat to the Quakers last week. Owings scored four points and had five rebounds in the loss to Penn.

"Right now, it's tough to look back and think about the positives because the huge negative is starting you in the face. You made four years of friends, it's a good experience and a good education."

But a tough part of that education was the in-your-face basketball seminar conducted this season by the fiery Scott. "Coach Scott demands so much of you, it's tough to have these demands placed on you in the first year when you haven't been doing that system," explained Wallace, who struggled with a lower back injury over the last two months of the season.

"I'm a big believer in a positive outlook. I don't think that calling timeouts to call you a little boy or something like that for not getting a rebound works. You get players not playing but worrying about the coach yelling at them."

Wallace acknowledged that his outlook on game preparation doesn't match that advocated by Scott. "I'm a little bit different in my approach," added Wallace. "Coach Scott talks about zeroing in and thinking about basketball all day. You have to be thinking about basketball but at the same time not overdo it."

In Wallace's view, the returning players should benefit from the hard lessons learned this season. "Our senior season has been a learning experience needed to establish a program," said Wallace. "That is difficult to take but that is what's necessary to be good under Coach Scott."

Scott, for his part, pledged to grow from the experience. "We all have to learn from what happened this year," said Scott.

"From a coaching standpoint, after being away from this league for four years, I learned a lot. We'll put our heads down, stick our noses to the grindstone, and keep our mouths shut. We'll do what we're supposed to do here at Princeton and let the chips fall where they may."

If everyone involved with the Tiger program can learn from those bitter lessons, something good might come out of the frustration that marked the 2004-05 campaign.

RAISING CANE

Injuries or surgeries involving the lower body often necessitate the use of a cane to help with walking until muscles and bones heal. Canes can also help people with arthritis and can prevent falls in those with weakness or minor instability problems. For seniors, in particular, canes may be the best treatment for gait disorders that do not lend themselves to medical or surgical treatment. Using the wrong type of cane, however, or using a cane improperly may result in instability that can lead to falls. With this in mind, consult with an occupational or physical therapist, who can help with the selection of a cane, make sure it is the proper length, and demonstrate its use.

Many special features are available for canes. Some canes fold down to form a convenient tripod seat. Cane holders will keep the cane upright when it is leaned against a table or counter. Wrist straps allow the user's hand to be free without setting down the cane. Forearm cuffs and platforms are available to shift the weight to the upper arm for persons with limited hand or wrist strength. To learn more about using canes properly, call THE REHABILITATION CENTER at 732-329-1181. Located at 155 Raymond Rd. (Buckingham Place Facility), we offer day, evening and Saturday hours.

Tiger Women's Hockey Had Intensity But Needs to Sharpen Finishing Skills

Princeton University women's hockey coach Jeff Kampersal knows that he gets a tremendous amount of commitment from his players.

But even Kampersal was amazed by the courage sophomore star Liz Keady demonstrated in the opener of the Tigers' recent ECAC Hockey League series at Yale.

"Liz skated hard to the bench in the first period and almost impaled herself on an open door," recalled Kampersal.

"Even though she was obviously in a lot of pain, she played the second and third periods. Afterward, we found out that she had a cracked rib, a collapsed lung, and a lacerated spleen. She showed what a tough kid she really is."

Unfortunately, the Tigers staggered along with their star that night against Yale as they squandered a late 3-2 lead on the way to losing 4-3 in overtime.

A night later with Keady sidelined along with three other teammates, Princeton put up a brave fight but lost 4-2 to end its season.

As Kampersal looks back on the pivotal defeat in the opener, his mind goes back to a famous scene in the classic Western film, Unforgiven.

"It was like Gene Hackman said to Clint Eastwood, 'I don't deserve to die like this,'" said Kampersal, whose club finished the season with a 16-10-3 record.

"I thought we deserved to win that game. We had a 3-2 lead and then there was a scramble in front of the net and they called a penalty shot. The girl made a good move. We controlled overtime for the most part. We had chances but we just didn't put them away."

While frustrated by the result, Kampersal had no qualms with his team's effort. "Last year, when we lost to Brown, I was disappointed because I didn't think we played up to our potential," explained Kampersal, who was in his ninth season guiding the Tigers. "This year, I thought every kid that played squeezed out every ounce of what she had, they gave their all. Yale just answered us every time; they were really opportunistic on net."

It was Princeton's chronic failure this season to take advantage of their opportunities around the goal that kept it from matching the 20-win total the program achieved in each of the previous two seasons.

"We lost a 30-goal scorer in Gretchen Anderson so I knew coming into the season that we'd have trouble scoring," said Kampersal, whose team averaged just 2.64 goals a game this season.

"The word on the street was that we had problems scoring and I think the girls subconsciously bought into that. Still, if you had told me before the season that we would've won 16 games, I would've been pleasantly surprised."

One of the players who kept Princeton competitive was its most pleasant surprise, junior goalie Roxanne Gaudiel.

Stepping into the skates of Tiger great Megan Van Beusekom, the 5'4 Gaudiel stood tall in the net, earning first-team All-Ivy honors as she posted a goals against average of 1.89.

"In the middle of the season, she really carried us," said Kampersal, referring to Gaudiel. "She had a string of three straight shutouts. We won a lot of 1-0, 2-1 games."

Kampersal is relying on his sophomore class to jump-start the team's offense next win-

Tiger Men's Hockey Went 8-20-3 But Gadowsky Saw Major Progress

On paper, it would seem that Guy Gadowsky couldn't have enjoyed his first season at the helm of the Princeton University men's ice hockey team.

The Tigers posted an 8-20-3 mark, going 3-13-1 in one dismal stretch from late November into mid-February. Princeton finished 10th of 12 teams in the ECAC Hockey League.

In the ECACHL playoffs, Princeton was swept 2-0 by St. Lawrence, getting outscored by an aggregate 11-2 in the series.

In reflecting on the season, though, Gadowsky seems to have had the time of his life. "I'm thrilled with the guys and how much fun it turned out to be," said Gadowsky, a former hockey star at Colorado College who came to Princeton after a successful five-year stint coaching Alaska Fairbanks.

"We had some bad stretches and injuries but each weekend the guys made it fun. The guys are so impressive. I was surprised at the atmosphere and how everybody enjoyed working hard. I'm glad that my young sons get the chance to hang out with the players."

Princeton made progress as it adapted to the aggressive, freewheeling style of hockey that Gadowsky favors. The Tigers scored 81 goals this winter compared to the 62 they tallied in 2003-04 when they posted a 5-24-2 record. Unlike recent seasons, Princeton featured a go-threat up front in Dustin Sproat, who scored 35 points on 18 goals and 17 assists.

"Dustin was the leading scorer in the ECAC," said Gadowsky of the second-team All-Ivy performer. "That's an incredible accomplishment."

The Tigers also got a lift from sophomore forward Grant Goeckner-Zoller, who had 32 points on six goals and 26 assists.

"Grant is a crafty player who is really creative around the goal," added Gadowsky of the honorable mention All-Ivy performer. "He really worked hard this year. He played most of the season with a shoulder injury."

Another standout for Princeton was first-team All-Ivy defender Luc Paquin, who scored 24 points on six goals and 18 assists. Paquin was the first Princeton player to earn first-team All-Ivy recognition since Kirk Lamb and Darren Yopyk received the honor for the 1999-2000 season.

Gadowsky thought his team also made strides defensively. "I thought our defensive zone coverage and penalty kill was greatly improved over the last part of the season," asserted Gadowsky. "We worked really hard on those two areas."

The Tigers' more aggressive style under Gadowsky created a buzz at Baker Rink this season. "The crowds were fantastic," said Gadowsky. "We were not a dominant home team this season by any means. I was very pleasantly surprised. We have strong support."

Gadowsky and his charges are going to do their level best to make sure that the Baker fans have a lot more to cheer about next winter.

"We clearly have a lot of work to do," maintained Gadowsky, who has worked overtime on recruiting and will find out the fruits of his labor this April. "We're trying to establish something here. It takes time to get these things to be second nature."

If Princeton can build on the progress it made this winter, the good-natured Gadowsky should have even more fun next season.

BOARD MEETING: Princeton sophomore defender Daryl Marcoux, right, digs the puck out of the board in a regular season game. The Tigers ended the season with a final record of 8-20-3.

GO-TO GUY: Princeton University star forward Dustin Sproat tries to elude a Harvard defender in a late January game. Sproat scored a team-high 35 points on 18 goals and 17 assists and was named a second-team All-Ivy performer for his efforts.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

STURHAHN, DICKENSON & BERNARD

As you try to determine who will win the 2004-05 NCAA basketball tournament, keep in mind that since 1966, every championship team has had at least one first-round NBA draft pick on its roster, and all but two champions had coaches who had held head coaching jobs for many years. The two exceptions: Tom Izzo, who was in his fifth year when Michigan State defeated Florida in 2000, and Steve Fisher, who was coaching only his sixth game when Michigan defeated Seton Hall in overtime in 1987.

NASCAR is building a Hall of Fame, and at the beginning of 2005, the cities invited to bid on becoming home to the hall were Kansas City, Daytona Beach, Charlotte and Atlanta. At the time, Charlotte was considered to be the front runner. One reason was that most NASCAR teams are based in the Charlotte area. But the other was that, amazingly, the North Carolina Auto Racing Hall of Fame is nearby Mooresville.

...

The 2004-05 NBA season marks the silver anniversary of the three-point shot, so here is some three-point trivia from the first 25 years. First three-pointer ever made: Boston's Chris Ford. Most three-pointers ever made: Indiana's Reggie Miller, more than 2,400 as of the start of the season. Most three-pointers attempted in a season: Dallas's George McCloud, 678 in 1995-96. Only championship teams to lead the league in three pointers: Houston in 1994 and 1995. Best three-point shooter in a career and in one season: Chicago's Steve Kerr, 45.4% made in his career, 52.4% in 1994-95. Worst career three-point shooter, minimum of 100 shots: Darrell Walker, 5.9% made (6 of 102 attempts).

Hoops Star Cowher Named Top Ivy Rookie

Living up to her advance billing, Princeton University freshman star Meagan Cowher was named last week as the women's basketball Ivy League Rookie of the Year.

Cowher, the daughter of Pittsburgh Steelers head coach Bill Cowher, who was a 1,000 scorer in high school and a three-time Western Pennsylvania All-Section pick, earned the Ivy Rookie of the Week title four times in the first seven weeks of the season.

The 6'1" Cowher, who missed six league games due to a stress fracture in her right foot, scored 11.1 points a game and was a unanimous pick to the All-Rookie team. She recorded a career-high 28 points and nine rebounds versus Saint Peter's on January 3 and finished the season third in the conference in field goal percentage (.500).

In addition to Cowher, Juniors Becky Brown and Katy O'Brien and freshman Ariel Rogers also received recognition from the league. Brown a 6'2" center, was named to the All-Ivy second team. Brown finished the season with eight 20-point games and led the team in scoring (13.8) and rebounding (6.7). She also sat atop the conference in field goal percentage (.527) and was fifth in scoring among Ivy players. She also became the 14th player in program history to hit the 1,000 point mark in her career, passing that mark in Princeton's win over Yale on January 29.

O'Brien, a 5'6" guard, received All-Ivy honorable mention recognition. She averaged 8.4 points a game and hit on 61-of-150 three-point attempts. O'Brien also dished for 111 assists, the third best single-season total in program history.

Rogers, a 5'11" forward, was named to the All-Rookie team. Rogers, who earned the Ivy Rookie of the Week award in late February, recorded a career-best with 14 points against Yale on January 29.

Tiger Women's Water Polo End Weekend With Split

Sophomore Danielle Carlson came up big to help the Princeton University women's water polo team split a pair of games last Sunday in San Diego.

Carlson had four goals as the 16th-ranked Tigers fell 10-7 to No. 11 San Diego State in the opening game of the day. In the nightcap, Carlson and Carolina Ardila scored two apiece as Princeton topped Bucknell 9-5.

In upcoming action, the Tigers, now 15-6, play Occidental on March 16 in Claremont, Calif. and Redlands on March 17 in Redlands, Calif.

Princeton Baseball Winless Down South

Continuing to struggle on its annual southern swing, the Princeton University baseball team fell 11-4 at North Carolina last Monday.

Aaron Prince pounded out three hits and Stephen Wendell hit a homer in a losing cause for the Tigers, who fell to 0-6 on the season.

Princeton continues its southern swing when it plays at North Carolina on March 16, at North Carolina A&T on March 17, and at Old Dominion on March 18, 19, and 20.

Track Star Farrell 3rd in NCAA Meet

Adding another line to her glittering resume, Princeton University junior track star Cack Ferrell placed third in the 3,000-meter run last weekend at the NCAA Women's Indoor Track and Field Championship meet in Fayetteville, Ark.

Ferrell clocked a time of 9:24.20 as she was bested only by winner Renee Metivier of Colorado and runner-up Adriana Pirtea of UTEP.

Princeton Softball Takes Doubleheader

Demonstrating offensive punch, the Princeton University softball team scored 11 runs in taking a doubleheader from St. Mary's last Monday in Moraga, Calif.

The Tigers took the twin bill by scores of 5-1 and 6-1 to improve to 9-3 on the season. Amanda Erickson and Melissa Finley hit homers to spark Princeton's offense. On the mound, Kristen Schaus (3-1) and Erin Snyder (4-1) picked up the wins for the Tigers.

Princeton plays Colorado State on March 16 in San Jose, Calif., the University of the Pacific on March 18 in Stockton, Calif., before playing Utah on March 19 and 20 in Stanford California.

Tiger Men's Tennis Tops No. 53 Purdue

Starting its California swing with a bang, the Princeton University men's tennis team topped S3rd-ranked Purdue 6-0 last Monday in a match played in San Diego.

The Tigers got wins from Josh Burman at No. 1 singles, Darius Craton at No. 2, Sratha Saengsuwan at No. 3, Hans Plukas at No. 4, Andrew Lieu at No. 5, and Shannon Morales at No. 6.

In upcoming action, Princeton, now 8-2, continues its California trip when it plays at the University of San Diego on March 17, plays Utah on March 18 in San Diego, and faces Loyola Marymount on March 19.

OFF THE MARK: Princeton University sophomore attacker Peter Trombino, left, finds the going tough as Princeton fell in its season-opener to top-ranked Johns Hopkins on March 5. Last Saturday, Trombino had a goal and two assists but it wasn't enough as the Tigers dropped an 11-7 decision at third-ranked Virginia. Scott Sowanick and Bob Schneider each had two goals as eighth-ranked Princeton fell to 0-2 on the season. The Tigers will look to break into the win column when they play at Hofstra on March 12.

Magic Run Ends for PHS Boys' Hockey; Core of Sophomores Hungry for More

Resourcefulness had been Paul Merrow as he reflected the calling card for the Princeton High boys' hockey team in from the tournament in a stirring late-season run that game played at Mennen Arena featured overtime wins in the Mercer County Tournament (MCT) title game and the opening round of the state playoffs.

The Little Tigers, though, ran out of tricks last Wednesday as they hit a brick wall and fell 5-0 to fourth-seeded Chatham in the Public state tournament round of 16.

"We didn't generate any real quality scoring chances," lamented PHS head coach

Paul Merrow as he reflected on his 20th-seeded team's exit from the tournament in a game played at Mennen Arena in Morristown. "The best chances we had came on the power play when we hit the pipe a couple of times. They had a really good defense. We played a very good team."

But with PHS finishing the season with a glittering 19-5-1 mark, there can be little doubt that they were a very good team this winter. "It was a great season, record-wise and improvement teams in our league. We put on quite a run."

PHS' high-octane offense played a key role in the team's heroics. The Little Tigers boasted three of the top scorers in the area in sophomores John Ryan and Peter Teifer and junior Sam Finnell.

The prolific Ryan scored 59 points on 35 goals and 24 assists to lead PHS. Teifer chipped in 46 points on 21 goals and 25 assists while Finnell contributed 43 points with 18 goals and 25 assists.

"They were great for us," said Merrow, referring to his high-powered trio who formed the Little Tigers' top line for much of the season.

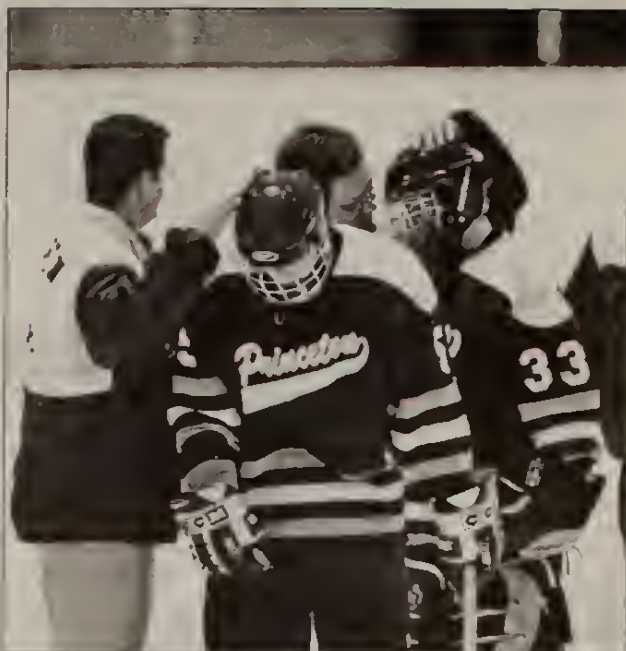

"Toward the middle of the season, we switched it up a little so that teams couldn't key on one line. To get the production we did from them was great."

PHS also got great work from diminutive sophomore goaltender Shane Leuck who anchored the PHS defense. "Shane was a rock for us all season," declared Merrow, who also cited the work of such defensemen as Brad Carduner, Christian McCracken, Justin Faulkner, and Jon Forman.

"He had one year of high school hockey under his belt. He didn't play club hockey during the season so I think he was fresher at the end."

In Merrow's view, the team also developed a special camaraderie that helped it thrive in pressure situations. "They were a tight group," added Merrow. "They are all friends on and off the ice. There was not much tension before big games. They were loose."

RECEIVING LINE: Princeton High players Jonathan Naylor (No. 5) and Shane Leuck are consoled by coaches Matt Govan, left, and Paul Merrow in the wake of PHS' 5-0 loss to Chatham last Wednesday in the Public state tournament round of 16.

KNEE SLAPPER: Princeton High junior star Sam Finnell goes to his knees as he tries to break through the Chatham defense last Wednesday in PHS' 5-0 loss in the Public state tournament. Finnell ranked third among the Little Tigers in points with 43, helping to spark a high-powered attack which resulted in PHS posting a final record of 19-5-1.

PHS Girls' Ice Hockey Hit New Heights; Foundation in Place for More Progress

When Blathnaid Mahon started playing with the Princeton High girls' ice hockey team as a freshman four seasons ago, she felt uneasy on the ice against such prep powers as Hill or Morristown-Beard.

As Mahon recently prepared to face Hill in the Mid-Atlantic Prep Girls Hockey League (MAPGHL) playoff for her final high school appearance, she brought an entirely different attitude to the ice.

"Going into Hill, we were pumped up to prove ourselves," said Mahon. "We had never beaten them; we were really excited. We didn't play up to our potential the night before against Mo-Beard. We always see ourselves as underdogs against the prep school teams; they look down on us."

By the end of the contest, it was PHS looking down on Hill as the Little Tigers skated to a stunning 6-1 win to end up second in the league tourney.

"It was a really good way to end our last game," asserted Mahon. "We wanted to go out with a good game. It was one of our best games."

In Mahon's view, the win exemplified the progress PHS made this winter as it ended up establishing a single-season record in wins with its final 12-4-1 mark.

"We lost a lot of good players from last year but we were actually better this year," said Mahon. "We worked together better as a unit. We were a lot more organized. There is a lot more excitement around the program."

PHS head coach Matt Becan was excited by how his team performed in the win over Hill. "It was a huge accomplishment," asserted Becan. "It was a great way to finish off the season. I told the girls after the loss to Mo-Beard that we wanted to see them respond. They really stepped up their game."

The Little Tigers produced a spirited attack in finally overcoming Hill. "The girls all know Hill, they know they have a tough goalie and some really good skaters," said Becan. "It came down to winning battles. We were able to get a lot of shots. We really wanted to try to exploit their goalie."

No Little Tiger exploited the Hill goalie more than senior star Vicki Chen, who ended her stellar PHS career with a four-goal effort. "Vicki is one of the backbones of the team," said Becan, who also got goals in the win from Katie Burke and Suzanne Hudis. "We have relied on Vicki to get us goals and get us pumped up."

But while Chen is a clear standout, the team's success this winter came down to balance. "We had such a well-rounded team this year," said Becan. "In the past we relied on a goalie or one great player. This year, we had so many good players."

The Little Tigers got valuable contributions up front from Mahon, her younger sister Dee Dee, and freshman star Blair Thompson. In the back, PHS was paced by defensemen Cami Mahon, Kristen Naylor, Rebecca Katz, and Melissa Diamond together with standout goalie Emily Schulte.

"The girls did a good job of getting to practice and putting in a tremendous effort," said Becan, noting that the team typically practiced twice a week at 5:30 a.m. "The girls really had to have focus at that time of the morning to get the most out of the limited time we have on the ice."

A key motivator for PHS was joining MAPGHL, which has eight teams from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. "It really gave us something to play for," said Becan, referring to the league.

"We've never been able to look at standings, we just had to focus on personal accomplishments. It made the game against Hill so significant. The girls really wanted to come in second."

From Becan's vantage point, the program's future is bright. "We continue to grow, we continue to expand," said Becan, who welcomed ten freshmen into the program this season. "This year, we were one of the top teams in New Jersey as well as the region."

Mahon, for her part, believes the team has developed the right mindset to keep thriving. "We always say 'head, heart, and hustle,' when we break the huddle," said Mahon, who will be playing field hockey this fall at St. Francis University (Pa.). "We're using that to get better. You have to have a hustle for the sport. Even in practice, you have to keep going. There has to be a drive to play."

With the drive that PHS demonstrated this winter, the program should keep going in the right direction.

CHESSforum

Solving chess puzzles is the best way to sharpen your tactical skills. As the adage goes: "there is no substitute for experience." There are a finite number of tactical situations that can exist in a chess game. They can be broken down into about twelve different categories and studied within their own context.

One such category is checkmates-in-two. If you've read this column before, you know that I provide such a puzzle every week for the reader to solve. Not only are these diagrams fun to conceive, but the solutions should elicit understanding of the geometry and behavior of the pieces.

Understanding these mates and the positions in which they are possible is basic knowledge that all tacticians have. If you know the situations that yield great mating possibilities, you can use these to develop your strategy.

As you maneuver around the board, you will be constantly adjusting to fend off an opponent and at the same time achieve active pieces. This piece activity, if correctly guided, could easily lead to mating possibilities.

This is the art of attacking chess.

She grew up in Binghamton, N.Y. As a child she loved playing the violin, taking long bike trips, and achieving success in school. Valedictorian of her high school, she later earned a bachelor's degree from MIT and master's degree from NYU, both in mathematics.

A Fellow of the Society of Actuaries, she was an employee of The Equitable before becoming a consultant for the company.

At the age of 37 she rediscovered her passion for long distance running. In two years she progressed from casual runner to national class, and was hopeful of making the Olympic trials for the marathon when, at age 40, she was diagnosed with breast cancer. She nevertheless continued to train like an Olympic athlete, inspiring her doctor, family, and friends. During her last years, the Internet's running sites became an increasingly important part of her life.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

A complete architectural re-design by Max Hayden brings a distinctive presence to this handsome home, allowing it to command its lake-side setting and celebrate its scenic views. A circular drive highlights the symmetry of the entry, with blue stone patios and their pergolas framing the front door. The entry, a two-story gallery with cove lighting and clerestory windows opens to the living room offering a marble fireplace and windowed box bay dining area boasting the lake view. The stunning kitchen features a granite center island with breakfast bar and light cherry wood cabinetry; a breakfast area with slate surround fireplace. A hallway leads to the master suite, with bedroom with harrel ceiling and cove lighting and well-appointed master bath with limestone floor. There is an additional pleasant bedroom and bath. A hallway door opens to a raised deck with steps to the lawn sweeping to the water's edge. On the lower level, a broad hallway, with slate floor opens to a covered patio and hot tub. The spacious family room has a grand raised hearth slate fireplace and doors to the patio. A study, with deep-silled picture window, adjoins an exercise room also opening to the outside. A secluded bedroom opening to the compartmentalized hall bath completes this level. An exceptional Princeton home, a picturesque Lake Carnegie setting.

ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH with Pepper deTuro WOODWINDS ASSOCIATES

DON'T SQUASH THAT BEETLE

Lady Beetles and Flower Flies are the first conspicuous beneficial insects to appear in the spring. Each of these predators feed primarily on the aphids and occasionally pine bark adelgids. The presence of these desirable insects is encouraged by a diversity of flowering plants in the landscape.

Beneficial insects are attracted to brightly colored petals and may use pollen and nectar produced by these plants as a supplementary food source. Reproductive activity of beneficial insects may be stimulated by these plant products.

Lady Beetles are most commonly called Lady Bird Beetles and Ladybugs. These insects are known by some 250 different names in 50 languages. Nearly all are a reference to the Virgin Mary or God. Adult Lady Beetles are first noticed during warm winter days crawling about on warm sunny surfaces or entering our homes. The insects return to overwintering sites when cold weather resumes. Most people plagued by swarms of these Lady Beetles are in a quandary as to whether to endure their bothersome presence for the sake of their good reputation and potential usefulness later on in the season or to eliminate them as nuisances.

Flower Flies are also known as Ashover Flies. Adults are flies with two pair of membranous wings. Their bodies are generally brightly colored yellows and blacks and often resemble bees. Flower Flies are approximately one-quarter inch in length. Flower Flies do not bite or sting humans. Adults feed on pollen and often seen hovering above plants. Their larvae are effective predators of aphids.

It you're not sure of just what insects are flying about your garden, give WOODWINDS a call at 924-3500.

The people who make a difference are not the ones with the credentials but the ones with the concern.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Tod Peyton

DON'T LET DEFERRED MAINTENANCE DEVALUE YOUR HOME

Many homeowners sigh with relief once they finally move into their dream home, thinking, "we'll never move out of this house." However, statistics prove that even the most satisfied owners have reason to sell their primary residence due to unexpected circumstances such as job relocation, health crises or changes in marital status.

If you have lived in your home for a number of years, you may have postponed a few needed repairs, overlooking leaky faucets, stained carpets, or aging appliances that somehow keep working. But once it's time to sell your home, those "little problems" can suddenly add up to a long list of deferred maintenance items.

The buyer's home inspector will look for blemishes that detract from the market value. As a seller, you will either need to take care of these issues as a condition of the sale or reduce the selling price to compensate the buyer for making the needed repairs later on.

Protect the resale value of your home by handling repairs as they come up. Replace the worn kitchen faucet now and you will conserve water, eliminate an annoying drip and reduce the list of problems the home inspector will find.

For dependable individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Please feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.

609-921-1550

This Constitution Hill mansion duplex is the penultimate in architectural refinement and sophistication.

In the annals of Princeton's historic homes, Constitution Hill is perhaps its most purposely designed mansion. Built for bibliophile, Junius Spencer Morgan, the mansion and its palatial grounds are now an enclave of distinguished condominiums. In the mansion, itself, this condominium represents the very reason for its existence. Glass paned doors at the private and secluded entrance overlook a landscaped allée of trees and open to the foyer, with its 14' ceiling and wainscoting; shutters fold into the walls on either side of the doorway. The original library is now the magnificently handsome living room: walls are encased with finely crafted bookshelves and cabinetry; a fireplace is the centerpiece of one wall and boasts an intricately carved wood overmantel; the opposite windowed wall offers a box bay, with window seat, and a molded plaster ceiling completes the room. The formal dining room, recently renovated, has a stepped peaked ceiling and doors to the outside. A concealed door opens to the dramatic all-white kitchen featuring pinball lighting and a broad casement-windowed bay. Nearby, the powder room. Stairs leading to the second floor are detailed with hand-tooled spindles copied from the mansion's main staircase. A hallway introduces the master suite: a spacious bedroom with windowed bay, dressing room and well-appointed bath. An additional bedroom has a corner fireplace and a third pleasant bedroom opens to the hall bath. An exceptional offering in one of Princeton's landmark properties.
